Biscotti placed on leave after district requests investigation into credentials

By Tyler Rhodes

The principal of Nome Elementary School has been placed on leave while a state commission investigates her teaching credentials. Jon Berkeley, an administrator with the district, will serve as acting principal while Shari Biscotti is on paid administrative leave.

"She is placed on administrative leave pursuant to a professional teaching practice complaint that the district filed with the state on April 1," Nome Public Schools Superintendent Jon Wehde said Tuesday. Wehde said the complaint was filed after information was provided to his office regarding Biscotti's credentials in California, the state in which Biscotti spent all or nearly all of her career before coming to Nome.

Records from California Commission on Teacher Credentialing show that Biscotti's credentials in that state were revoked in August 2009, four months after she had already been

Council approves city's agreement with volunteer vet

By Laurie McNicholas

Veterinarian Christina Kilby will administer vaccinations and medications to animals for the City of Nome on a volunteer basis under an agreement with the city approved by the Nome Common Council at a special meeting March 30. The agreement extends from March 31, 2010 through March 31, 2011 unless terminated by either party

Kilby, who is employed by Norton Sound Health Corp., volunteered to provide the services because the city lacks an operating veterinary clinic. In addition to administering vaccinations and anti-parasitic medications, she will euthanize suffering or unadoptable animals, provide limited treatment to injured animals living within and around the Nome area and establish and maintain medical records and a controlled substances log per Alaska statutes and veterinary practice regulations.

Kilby commented in a subsequent conversation with The Nome Nugget that her limited services will be conducted solely through the city and that she has no plans to open a private veterinary practice. She also noted that any concerns or questions regarding animal care need to be made through the city's animal shelter and not directly to her at work at Norton

Sound Health Corp. Kilby also is committed to working with the city's animal control officer to establish a list of charges for services provided to the public to cover the costs incurred by the city for equipment, medications and supplies. The agreement stipulates that the city will reimburse Kilby for such costs.

Councilman Stan Andersen asked City Manager Josie Bahnke whether Kilby will use the city's animal control facility to provide veterinary services, and he questioned whether the facility has running water. Bahnke assured him the facility has running water and that Kilby is working with the animal control officer to use it.

Andersen also asked Bahnke to clarify a statement in the agreement that reads: "Contractor may, but does not currently intend to, use City's animal control facility for purposes of providing veterinary care to animals for Contractor's own profit." Bahnke said Kilby intends to use the facility only as a volunteer and not for business.

Noting that city ordinances require an owner of pets (dogs, cats and horses) to obtain an anmual license from the city clerk and to provide proof the pets have been properly immunized, Councilman Jerald Brown asked whether Kilby will provide such immunizations under the agreement with the city. Bahnke said Kilby will work with the animal control officer on an annual immunization clinic, but the agreement with the city does not include other immunization services for privately owned pets.

Prior to approving the agreement, the council adopted a motion to amend it by deleting the following sentence from the section on reimbursement of expenses: "City shall reimburse Volunteer for the cost [of] the insurance policy required by paragraph 4(e)(1) of this Agreement." Larson noted the agreement does not include paragraph 4(e)(1).

Veterinary services were formerly provided to the city by Dr. Derek Leedy, who is currently appealing the suspension of his li-

The council unanimously approved a lution authorizing Mayor Denise Michels to enter into an agreement for the Nome Elementary School Boilers Replacement Project estimated to cost $534,367. Prior to the vote, Nome Public Schools Superintendent Jon Wehde told council members that NPS has set aside $500,000 for the project, the total cost of which is capped at $600,000. He asked the city to provide additional funds required to complete the project.

The resolution notes that the agreement is based on conversations among Bahnke, City

Unalakleet dad faces sentence in daughter's death

By Sandra L. Medearis

In an apparent plea agreement, the court has set June 4 for sentencing in the case of a dad convicted of manslaughter in the death of his 11month-old daughter who was starved for some months and then injured when her mother threw her to the floor.

The mom, Heather Takak, had been Johnson's longtime partner. The couple had a son born in 2001.

A Unalakleet jury found Frank R. Johnson guilty of not protecting the infant, Christina Johnson, from harm. According to testimony in the case, before she assaulted the baby, Takak starved Christina to the point where the infant had essentially no fat left in her body. Her muscles had atrophied. One witness testified that Christina looked like a famine victim at the time of her death.

The case has been in the courts since 2004 when a grand jury indicted Johnson and Takak on differing charges of murder in the baby's death at Unalakleet Clinic in November 2004.

Takak, following a plea agreement, is serving a prison sentence. A Unalakleet jury found Johnson guilty of a reduced charge of manslaughter and ruled that the babe had died from head injuries incurred when her mother admittedly threw her to the floor in Johnson's absence. However, the jury also returned a special verdict form showing unanimous agreement that the cause of the child's death was the head injury, not starvation or a combination of injury and starvation. Johnson argued that the

Dear Editor.

We were so excited to be able to go to the Nome Arts Council, One Voice. It was soo incredible. We felt like we were at an elegant event in some big city. Everyone was so dressed up. The four very talented, beautiful ladies who performed had such amazing stage presence, and the level of professional talent was amazing. The muscians that accompanied them were so impressive. The absolutely lovely evening went way to fast. The decorations, food, lightning, waiters and attire was so perfect for the event. We know so much work went into this concert, we just wanted to thank every volunteer and the person or persons who envisioned it and made it happen. We can only imagine the many hours of rehearsing that went into this excellent performance. It was a powerful message delivered so elegantly and proceeds donated to such a great cause. We just hope it can happen again. We would go again and again. Sincerely,

Ruth Weiss, Annie Blandford Nome, AK 99762

Hello out there,

I am sitting here watching the Fourth Kind and it makes me feel compelled to comment about it.

The figment of this person's imagination is unbelievable. Oh, I believe such things can happen, but more like someone killed the person and got rid of the body somewhere.

Unity and Harmony

The recent "One Voice" concert is a wonderful example that different beautiful voices can come together in harmony to produce a fantastic event. Nome can be proud of the amazing folks we have in our midst who volunteered and sang, played, donated, decorated, baked, organized and served to raise funds for Nome's cancer support group the ICANS, and Norton Sound's Make a Patient Smile program.

What is true in the arts can also be applied to other aspects of our community. A single voice can deliver a message. A group of voices can harmonize and the music is uplifting and enlightening. It takes practice, but the result is something joyful and happy. When voices are strident and raised in anger, the result is a cacophony of noise that puts nerves on end and rattles the teeth. We need harmony on all levels of government from school boards to legislature to the congress. On the national level we are strident and hateful. We have neighborhoods at odds with each other; we have congressmen shouting, "Kill the bill." We have senators who are such a bunch of dysfunctional obstructionists that they should be put in a sack with a bunch of cats.

We need harmony. We have many different voices, many different cultures and backgrounds. When we work together we can harmonize and achieve things for the greater good of all. We can be proud of ourselves. Let's take a lesson from the Nome Arts Council and the "One Voice" concert. When we work together we can achieve greatness.

Illegitimus non carborundum

Nome, Alaska where a person could put another person. Do they even check the old houses that haven't been used in forever?

And people do just get on planes and take off without telling anyone because they are afraid that someone might stop them. So some might still be out there.

Then again there is the jetty. With the way the current is, I'm sure they wash out to sea and it's a vast sea.

And then again, I really do believe that there are ghosts just as I believe there is a God. And if there is a God then people are given a chance (maybe) to atone themselves. Or they could be tortured souls that maybe don't realize they passed away and need help passing. Then again—you could reside over their grave. Granted—things like that could happen—anything could happen. That's life.

If I was the producer I would at least tour the area to see how it looks, at least then it might seem more believable. If I had an aerial picture of Nome I'd add it to this letter—just to show them what Nome looks like.

I guess I should be nice now and quit. I hope all of you have a wonderful spring. Summer—lots of fun to go fishing in the spring. It's even more fun to go enjoy the outdoors and go pick greens to give to the elders. You should see their eyes light up—and the smile on their faces is something to see.

Remember to be nice to each other and to enjoy the heck out of visiting each other. That's a lot of fun too.

If you are smart you will train in a profession that you enjoy the most. It is not fun for yourself if you just settle for a job in which you will be unhappy. Just make sure you get your training before being an idiot. At least if you train for what you really enjoy, you'll always have a smile on your face.

Take care you all. God Bless. As always, Karen Nanouk Unalakleet, AK 99684

Dear Editor,

This letter is to all the senators, legislators, Governor of Alaska, state representatives, and to the President of the United States of America.

There are still some villages in Alaska without sewer and running water, but all there is to read in the newspaper is how much money will be spent on roads in the near future.

I do not recall how many years ago, Alaska had a governor whose campaign speech was "If you vote for me, I will put the honey bucket in a museum." And he used that quote twice.

I have been living in Wales, Alaska for 28 years now with no running water or a flush toilet.

How long do the people living in the villages in Alaska have to wait to have the luxury of turning on a faucet to get a drink of water or wash clothes, or take a shower or bath, and flushing a toilet in their own home?

Seems to me if there is money for building roads, there should also be a plan for water and sewer for the villages in Alaska that do not have this luxury.

Wake up Alaska! Thank you, Debra Seetook Wales, AK 99783

EASTER EGG HUNT ON THE BERING SEA? — No, it's not. It's May 24, 1915 and these anxious Nomeites are celebrating the arrival of the first supply ship in eight months. They are greeting the Corwin one mile south of Nome on the ice edge. Imagine no delivery of fresh fruit, eggs or milk for eight months. That's why real Nomeites don't like fresh eggs or milk. They grew up on canned milk and "kept" eggs.

Alaska News Briefs

After the 26th Legislature hammered out the state's operational and mental health budget last week, a House resolution that may have big consequences for Nome and the Bering Strait/Norton Sound region has been flying under the radar screen of the Alaska press corps. House concurrent resolution 22 is to establish an Alaska Northern Waters Task Force and it cleared the House community and regional affairs committee and is on the move into the House finance committee. The purpose of the task force is to facilitate regional coordination and State of Alaska leadership in the ongoing development of the United States' policies relating to the opening of Arctic marine transportation routes, national security and resource development. The task force will comprise legislators from northwestern Alaska, leaders from Arctic communities and key federal agencies. Together, they will assess and facilitate the creation of a joint state and federal entity to coordinate United States and Alaska interests that result from the opening of Arctic waters.

The resolution aims to create a joint federal/state commission that guides interagency and inter-jurisdiction actions in the Arctic. It provides an opportunity for Alaska's Legislature and Arctic communities to assume a proactive role in shaping such a body, and ensures that Alaska's unique interests are strongly represented.

The task force would hold hearings in Barrow, Nome and Kotzebue, as well as Anchorage. By meeting in these regions, the task force will be able to seek guidance and feedback from the residents of the regions most likely to experience impacts from increased activity in the Arctic.

The Alaska Northern Waters Task Force will deliver its findings to the Alaska Legislature in January 2012, including legislative proposals for consideration.

Shell Oil gets EPA's OK to drill three exploratory wells

ANCHORAGE (AP)— The Environmental Protection Agency announced last week that it had approved a clean-air permit for Shell to operate its drilling ship in the Chukchi Sea. Shell wants to drill three exploratory wells on the Arctic Ocean acreage it leased in 2008. The company also awaits an air-quality permit for proposed drilling in the Beaufort Sea; a decision will be made this month. Shell spokesman Curtis Smith said delivery of the final Chukchi Sea air permit on the heels of Wednesday's news that the company would continue to have access to offshore acreage obtained in 2008 was excellent news. However, he noted the permit must be listed for 30 days before it becomes usable. and it could be appealed to the Environmental Appeals Board. The U.S. Minerals Management Service estimates the Chukchi holds recoverable reserves of up to 12 billion barrels of oil and 54 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, a promising prospect for oil and gas companies in Alaska, where production has been declining for over two decades.

Senate passes legislation to ensure rural school construction funding

The Alaska Senate voted unanimously last week to guarantee school construction funding for both Rural Education Attendance Areas and Municipal districts. The bill codifies in statue a system for the equitable distribution of school construction funds, something that has historically been done through the yearly budgetary process.

Senate Bill 237 creates an REAA construction fund that would give rural areas the same level of funding predictability that urban areas have. SB 237 now moves to the Alaska House of Representatives for consideration.

Voters get to decide to expand Legislature

Last week, the Alaska Senate passed a resolution sponsored by the Senate Community and Regional Affairs Committee asking that a constitutional amendment be placed before voters this year to increase the size of the legislature. Senate Joint Resolution 21 would add 8 seats to the 40member House of Representatives and 4 seats to the Alaska Senate. Senator Donny Olson, D-Nome, Chair of the Senate Community and Regional Affairs Committee said increasing legislative membership would help address a population growth that has disproportionately favored Alaska's larger, urban areas.

Olson said that Alaska's population has tripled since statehood, with growth coming especially on the road system and in urban areas of the state. This lumps geographically large Senate and House districts together that are comprised of communities that often have little in common, said Olson. Senator Olson said getting SJR 12 passed and the constitutional amendment before the voters in the 2010 general election is critical, as election district boundaries will be redrawn in 2012 based on this year's census. The resolution goes next to the House of Representatives for consideration.

Bill passed requiring corporate and union campaign disclosure

In a response to a federal court ruling that allows corporations to spend unlimited amounts of money on political campaigns, the Alaska Senate passed a bill requiring corporations and labor unions to report their contributions and expenditures in elections. In the wake of the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling, Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, Alaska is facing participation by corporations and unions for or against candidates in its elections for the first time. Because this activity had been banned, there are currently no reporting requirements in law for these groups. SB 284 addresses Alaska law to be sure that the public is fully informed of the contributions and expenses of these new participants, both in reports to the Alaska

Cadets recognized at year's first JROTC award ceremony

By Sam Schmidt

On Feb. 25, the Nanook Battalion congregated at Nome-Beltz High School was recognized for their accomplishments.

At the ceremony many cadets were promoted, but probably the most significant was the promotion of Gregory Saclamana and Landis Bjorgen. Saclamana was promoted to the rank of Cadet Lieutenant Colonel and the position of Battalion Commander. Bjorgen was promoted to the rank of Cadet Colonel and the position of Assistant to the Instructor.

At the ceremony the battalion colors, or flags, were passed from Bjorgen to Saclamana. This practice is a tradition for military and JROTC units when there is a change in command. The battalion colors are passed from the battalion cadet command sergeant major, Janet Oquilliuk to the outgoing battalion commander, Bjorgen, who passes through the instructor to the new battalion commander, Saclamana, who then passed them back to the command sergeant major for safe keeping. This action symbolizes the action of one commander relinquishing command of the unit to the incoming commander with the all of the responsibilities associated with commanding the unit.

The ribbons awarded at the ceremony were:

• The Parade Ribbon (awarded to cadets who participated in local community parades): Thomas Ashenfelter, Landis Bjorgen, Nivi Brandt, Damon Buffas, Reed Eide, Katelynn Gray, Kyle Griemmsmann, Elizabeth Herzner, Brandon Lancaster, Janet Oquiliuk, Tara Richards, Gregory Saclamana, Sam Schmidt and Cameron Smith.

• The Community Service Ribbon (awarded to cadets who participated in local community service activities): Jamie Adsuna, Kyle Clark, Brenna Dickson, Kyle Griemmsmann, Elizabeth Herzner, Janet Oquiliuk, Tara Richards, Cameron Smith, Jessica Saclamana, Albert Tall and Sam Schmidt.

The Personal Appearance Ribbon (awarded to cadets who consistently present an outstanding appearance): Cameron Smith, Sam Schmidt, Jessica Saclamana, Gregory Saclamana, Tara Richards, Janet Oquiliuk, Xaiver Kowchee, Elizabeth Herzner, Kyle Griemmsmann, Katelynn Gray, Reed Eide, Brenna Dickson, Kyle Clark, Nivi Brandt, Landis Bjorgen and Thomas Ashenfelter.

• The Service Learning Ribbon (awarded to cadets who participate in planning community service projects): Elizabeth Herzner, Thomas Ashenfelter, Nivi Brandt, Kyle Clark, Brenna Dickson, Katelynn Gray, Kyle Griemmsmann, Tara Richards and Sam Schmidt.

• The Essay Ribbon (Awarded to cadets who score high on the annual JROTC-themed essay): Landis Bjorgen, Nivi Brandt, Kyle Clark, Elizabeth Herzner, Janet Oquiliuk, Tara Richards, Gregory Saclamana, Jessica Saclamana, Sam Schmidt, Cameron Smith and Thomas Ashenfelter. Ashenfelter was honored for having the best essay this year.

Sharpshooters make their mark at 2010 Idita-shoot

Submitted by the JROTC

This year's Idita-shoot was again a huge success.

On March 18 there were 31 competitors in four different divisions competing for different prizes donated by businesses in the Nome area with the grand prize being a round tripticket donated by Bering Air. Quality Auto, Nome Arctic Cat, Nome Outfitters, Outsiders Hardware and Wilderness Ski-Doo contributed the rest of the prizes which where distributed to the individuals that placed in either the poker shoot that occurred in early January and the Idita-Shoot.

The Idita-Shoot gives competitors an opportunity to travel the Iditarod trail via air rifle. Competitors shoot at bullseyes that are 4 1/2 centimeters wide at a range of 10 meters, or 33 feet. This creates a challenge for the shooters as they shoot at this range using the standing position without support. Only the first through sixth graders shoot in the prone (lying down) position.

The JROTC cadets conduct shooting events to raise money for their activities account and to increase the competitive spirit within the shooting community. The main reason for these shooting activities is to teach gun safety. The safety rules that are instituted on the air rifle range can be applied to the handling of all guns. The main acronym that is used is MAT for "muzzle, action and trigger." Keep the muzzle pointed in a safe direction at all times, keep the action clear and open until you are ready to shoot, and keep your finger off the trigger until you are ready to shoot your target. By following these safety rules we have not experienced a single gun-related accident within the Nome-Beltz marksmanship program that is in its seventh year.

The JROTC cadets and staff congratulate this year's Idita-Shoot winners.

Project Manager Randy Romenesko and NPS representatives and that the city has approved a contract with RSA Engineering for the design, engineering and construction administration services for the project.

The agreement calls for completion of the project no later than Oct. 15, 2010. The project currently is out to bid, and an award date is scheduled for the council meeting on April 26, Bahnke reported in a memo to the council.

Software dilemma

A resolution to accept proposals from Caselle, Inc. and Capital Software, Inc. and authorize the city manager to enter into software license, maintenance and support agreements was discussed by council members and personnel from the finance and city clerk's offices before receiving the council's unanimous approval.

The resolution summarizes a process that began in 2007 when the council asked the city to research an integrated computer system to provide more efficient operations to Nome. The city finance office has used a payroll, budgeting and accounting software package on an IBM AS/400 computer since 1993. The city clerk's office handles property taxes, sales taxes, licenses, permits and cash receipts with a manual paper-based system and some rudimentary spreadsheets and Microsoft Access files

In May 2009 the city retained Resource Data, Inc. to analyze workand business/technical requirements of the finance and clerk's offices and to prepare material for a request for information. The city issued an RFI to solicit information from a broad range of potential suppliers of finance software packages. Caselle, Inc./Capital Software and Tyler Technologies were invited to submit quotes through a competitive negotiation process based on the RFI requirements. Bahnke based her recommendation to accept the Caselle/Capital proposal on the evaluation of both proposals and bids submitted by the firms.

A spreadsheet accompanying the resolution shows that Caselle/Capital bid a total of $76.125 for license fees; conversion; set up services and training; and travel, lodging, and per diem. Tyler bid $145,970 for the same components. In addition, Caselle/Capital bid $10,900 for annual operations and maintenance, compared to Tyler's bid of $20,595. The difference in bids submitted for license fees was about 10 percent, with Caselle bidding $35,900 and Tvler $39,860. However in other expense categories, Tyler's cost figures were two to four times higher than those of Caselle/Capital.

Councilman Brown said he had heard that one of the departments was not happy with the choice of Caselle/Capital due to a lack of integration. Noting that he had researched the proposals and found that some cost numbers do not compare to the same things, he said he would like more time to look at the proposals and he wants to hear from the city's Controller Cussy Kauer and City Clerk Sandy Sturgis-Babcock.

Kauer said it does not matter to her which software package the city purchases, adding that she will defer to Payroll Technician Dana Handeland for discussion of the proposals. Kauer said she has worked for the city 36 years, this is the last computer conversion for her as a city employee and that she does not expect to remain a city employee long enough to work with the new software.

"The finance department can run on what we have for a year or so," Kauer said. Noting that the council's mandate was to get the clerk's office off a manual paper-based system, she said no computer conversion can occur in the clerk's office until many hours of data entry work has taken place. "Now we have downtime because the budget is closing—let's get on with it," she urged. She estimated it will take five to six people working weekends to get a computerized system in the clerk's office up and running by July.

Brown said he is aware that personnel from the finance and city clerk's offices spent 100 hours considering the proposals, and he asked Handeland whether it is her firm belief that the Caselle/Capital package will integrate the offices.

"Both [products] will do the job," Handeland replied. She said she developed pros and cons, and then backed Bahnke's choice of Caselle/Capital for reasons that included positive feedback from other users of Caselle/Capital software and cost differentials in the bids. "Caselle.net is the latest and greatest," Handeland added.

Sturgis-Babcock said she had thought the council would decide which software vendor to select at its meeting on April 12, and she needs a couple of more weeks to compare modules. She said she is not sure the city is buying all that it needs from Caselle/Capital. "From what I've seen the [Caselle/Capital] package fits finance better than the clerk's office," she added.

Sturgis-Babcock said she wants Tyler to explain the differences between its bid and that of Caselle/Capital in certain cost areas. Tyler bid $21,595 for travel, lodging and per diem compared to a $5,000 bid from Caselle/Capital; and $58,100 for set up services and training compared to Caselle/Capital's bid of $28,175. Sturgis-Babcock said it is worth taking one more look at Tyler to find out what the costs really are.

Bahnke and Handeland both said that Tyler and Caselle/Capital have different business models, with Tyler's limited to "boots on the ground," meaning that its proposal would cost the city more for travel, lodging and per diem.

Councilman Andersen asked whether anyone had asked Tyler why the firm would charge $58,000 for set up and training?

"I asked," replied Handeland.
"They said that's how we do it."

Noting that the city manager oversees everything and the council relies on her recommendations, Brown asked Bahnke whether in her opinion the resolution must be approved during the March 30 meeting or can wait for two weeks.

Bahnke said a big piece of her decision was based on positive feedback the Nome harbormaster received from Valdez to her inquiry about Caselle/Capital software in relation to port billing. The price was not the only factor considered, Bahnke added. She said she wants to move forward with implementing the plan, and at the end of the day she recommends that the council accept the Caselle/Capital proposal.

"We'll support the city manager's position and make it work," Sturgis-Babcock said. "If it's not on my head, OK."

All council members attended the meeting except for Mary Knodel, who was out of town.

hired by Nome Public Schools. Biscotti's name was among a slate of teachers and administrators recommended to have their credentials revoked or face other disciplinary measures at the August meeting. The commission's approved minutes show that the recommendations for the entire slate were affirmed without debate.

Biscotti informed elementary school staff and Wehde by a March 31 e-mail that she would be leaving for California to tend to an ill family member. She has been out of town ever since. Efforts to reach Biscotti by e-mail for comment on this story were unsuccessful as of press time April 6.

Prior to coming to Nome, Biscotti worked as an educator for years in her home state of California. Her last position before moving to Nome was principal at Rancho Cucamonga Elementary School in the community of the same name in southern California. The Nome Board of Education approved the hire of Biscotti in April 2009. Most recently, the school board renewed her contract for the 2010-2011 school year at its Jan. 12 meeting.

Wehde said at the time of Biscotti's hiring, the district believed all her credentialing was in order. "Her hiring process was unremarkable in that all of the standard assurances and practices were completed at the time," he said.

The California commission's August decision states that all of Biscotti's certification documents were revoked and any pending appeals were denied as a result of what it labeled as misconduct pursuant to two specific California education codes. The first of the two codes mentioned states that the commission "shall privately admonish, publicly reprove, revoke or suspend for immoral or unprofessional conduct, or for persistent defiance of, and refusal to obey, the laws regulating the duties of persons serving in the public school system, or for any cause that would have warranted the denial of an application for a credential or the renewal thereof, or for evident unfitness for service."

The second code mentioned carries a long list of possible transgressions for which the commission can deny any application for a new or renewed certificate. Among the laundry list of reasons are excessive use of intoxicating

"Superintendents don't gumshoe an issue like this."

beverages, addiction to controlled substances, the commission of acts involving moral turpitude, a prior revocation of certification documents and the practice of deception or fraud in an application, among others.

While the California commission's minutes reflect the revocation of Biscotti's certifications, no details or specifics are given as to why the commission found Biscotti to be in violation of the two mentioned statutes.

The investigation into Biscotti's credentials will be handled by Alaska Professional Teaching Practices Commission, which Wehde said works hand-in-hand with the state Department of Education. "Superintendents don't gumshoe an issue like this," Wehde said.

He added that Biscotti will remain on leave until that investigation runs its course. Likening it to a doctor in an operating room without a medical license, Wehde said if a teacher or administrator's certification is in question, there is no other option than to remove them from the school until any fog is lifted. "There's no secondary course of action for a school superintendent to pursue," he said.

Despite the issues surrounding Biscotti's certification in California, she received a temporary administrator's certificate from the State of Alaska. Wehde said the certificate was temporary in nature because Biscotti needed to complete six hours of instruction on culturally responsive education, a requirement that nearly all teachers and administrators still need to complete when new to Alaska.

According to a search on the Alaska Department of Education and Early Development website, the temporary certificate is valid from May 2009 to June 2010. The listing, however, spells Biscotti's first name as "Shary," whereas communications from the Nome district and her former district in California spell her name as "Shari." The latter spelling is also used in the state's public schools database.

Before her departure from Nome, Biscotti sent the elementary school staff and Wehde an e-mail March 31, saying she had to abruptly travel to California to attend to her grandmother who had undergone emergency surgery. The departure came just as students were preparing to take the tests on which school performance is judged. "I know this is a terrible time, but I do need to see her. I have made arrangements for Jon [Berkeley] to be there," she wrote. "He can take care of all your needs. I am not sure of my return date yet. For now, I can be reached through email."

Wehde said Biscotti's concern for her grandmother's health was well-known in the school before the credentialing issue came up and described the timing of her departure as coincidental.

Teachers at the elementary school were told Monday afternoon by Berkeley that he would serve as the acting principal until further notice. Berkeley currently works in the district office in a number of roles for Nome Public Schools, including handling Native education and the coordination of federal programs. He had applied for the elementary school principal position when the district started its search to replace Carl White last year. The district widened its search beyond the immediate area and ultimately hired Biscotti.

Nome Elementary Principal Shari Biscotti

The turmoil at the elementary school comes as the district's secondary school, Nome-Beltz Junior/Senior High School, deals with controversial turnover at the top. In a move that split many in the community and spurred a recall vote against all five of its members, the school board voted Jan. 12 to not renew the contracts of Principal Janeen Sullivan and Assistant Principal Doug Boyer. The board has never given a reason for its decision, a result of a split vote, despite the fact that the two administrators had received positive evaluations from Superintendent Jon Wehde.

When Biscotti introduced herself to the community during a reception in May, she cited her experience of rising through the ranks in various California schools before moving into administrative roles. She talked about "flipping" underperforming schools as a principal so that they would meet state and federal performance benchmarks.

At that meeting she said she was nearly ready to come to work in Alaska for the Kenai Peninsula Borough School District as the principal of the Tyonek School. She said her mind was changed after several persuasive phone calls from the Nome superintendent at the time, Rick Luthi. Current Superintendent Wehde was hired just days after the school board approved Biscotti's contract.

state had presented insufficient evidence that he was aware of the risk that Takak would physically assault Christina.

Subsequently, in response to Johnson's motion for acquittal, Judge Ben Esch denied Johnson an acquittal, but ordered a new trial. Johnson appealed to a higher court that reversed Esch's finding and sent the case back to the trial court for Johnson to be sentenced on the manslaughter verdict. Johnson went to the Alaska Supreme Court.

Johnson argued throughout that even if it were found he had been aware that Takak was starving Christina, he had no reason to be aware of a particular danger that Takak might assault Christina, and the death from the head injury took the issue of Johnson's awareness and protection from starvation off the table. In its opinion, the court of appeals said it was sufficient that Johnson was aware that Takak was trying to kill Christina.

The Supreme Court's opinion said the court of appeal's standard for responsibility was too broad, and sent the case back to the court of appeals for a closer look, saying a "defendant's liability for harm to another is not limitless because natural consequences are those a reasonable person could have foreseen," according to court records.

"Because in this case the court of appeals applied a foreseeability standard that did not expressly include a consideration of remoteness we vacate its decision and remand for further proceedings with the standard articulated in this opinion."

A part of that opinion handed down to the court of appeals was, "A trier of fact must determine whether the actual harm was within the scope of risk hazarded by the defendant's [in this case, Johnson's] conduct."

Underlying the court proceedings had been the differentiation of civil liability and criminal liability in a parent neglecting to protect a child from harm.

Johnson has served approximately three years in jail since his conviction.

Conger makes history at Nordic ski championships

By WISA staff

Nearly 50 rural Alaskan skiers and biathletes negotiated spring snow conditions and a winding, challenging course in Tanana this past weekend while competing in the 23rd annual Western Interior Ski and Biathlon Championships.

Of the many outstanding performances produced by the athletes, one turned out to be record-breaking.

Nome's Emerson Conger won gold medals in the 9-kilometer ski race, the biathlon race, and had the fastest split in the team relays. His endeavors would help him lay claim to a third straight high school boys Ski Meister Award, the first in the history of rural state skiing and biathlon to do so.

Including a junior high Ski Meister Award earned as an eighth grader, Conger's 2010 Ski Meister Award was his fourth overall, tying him with Arnold Marks of Tanana, who first completed the feat in 1999. During his current run, Conger has won 12 consecutive Western Interior Championship races.

Conger's efforts were supported by Nome teammate, and first-time Western Interior Championships medalist, Sam Schmidt. Schmidt earned silver in the 9-kilometer race and, despite breaking his ski, a bronze in the biathlon.

The duo led the Nome team to their second straight high school boys' team title, becoming only the third team in Western Interior history to do so. Nome's streak still lags well behind the seven straight won by White Mountain between 1997 and 2003.

White Mountain would go on to take second place, piloted by the bronze- and silver-medal performances of Asa Bergamaschi. Although rival competitors at this meet, Conger and Bergamaschi were teammates on the Team Alaska biathlon squad at last month's 2010 Arctic Winter Games in Grande Prairie, Alberta, Canada.

The team from Galena, lead by Francis Katongan, took third place.

Also winning all three of her races was Sierra Corsetti, a home school student living in Unalakleet who raced as an independent. Corsetti skied away from the high school girls' competition to capture her second Ski Meister Award.

Corsetti, also a 2010 Team Alaska Arctic Winter Games biathlon member, enjoyed a 5 1/2 minute margin in the biathlon over double-silver medalist Ana Lee Swanson, also of Unalakleet.

Teammates Caitlyn Tozier and Miranda Murphy (another 2010 Arctic Winter Games biathlete) traded bronze medal spots on the podium in the ski race and biathlon, respectively.

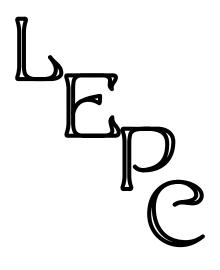

The pair would use a gold medal in the team relay to capture Nome's first high school girls' team trophy, outlasting the Nenana team, which was buoyed by Danny Fisher. Galena, led by Zoey Niksik, finished third.

While there was little drama in either of the high school Ski Meister Awards, the same was not true for the junior high girls, whose division saw the deepest competition at the meet.

In one of the closest Ski Meister contests in Western Interior Ski and Biathlon Championships history, gold medal biathlete Aly Daniels of Unlalakeet won her first Ski Meister Award by exploiting a nine-second advantage in her relay split on the final day of competition to edge Rosa Schimdt of Nome, the gold medalist in the 4.5-kilometer ski race.

Unalakeet took Daniels' results and utilized bronze-medal performances from sister Katie Daniels in the ski race, and from teammate Jonisha Wilson in the biathlon, to earn the third

ANNUAL NOTICE OF COMMUNITY RIGHT TO KNOW (CRTK) DATA

The State Emergency Response Commission (SERC) requires the Nome Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) by law in SARA Title III (42 U.S.C. 11044) to give public notice of the availability of Tier II reports submitted by local and regional organizations on hazardous substances and extremely hazardous substances that are in use or in storage.

The Tier II reports for 2009 are available for review. However, in the interest of public safety, access to the information is restricted until a full and complete background check is performed on the interested party. At this time, members of the public would be required to complete an application and have a background check performed before any information can be released.

The Nome LEPC meets approximately 6 or more times a year. Meetings are open to the public and the public is welcome to attend. Notices are posted on public bulletin boards and at City Hall one week before the meeting and will be announced by radio and newspaper. If you have any questions, please call the City of Nome Emergency Services Administrator/LEPC Coordinator at 443-7824. This notice is paid for by Local Emergency Planning Committee Grant, State of Alaska.

straight junior high girls' team trophy. Only the dominant late '90s junior high girls teams from White Mountain have more consecutive team trophies (seven) than Unalakleet.

Schmidt would use her gold and silver medals to solidify the Nome team's second-place finish. Romay Harris, from Galena, would lead her team to third place.

In the junior high boys division, a dual for the Ski Meister Award ensued between skiers from sites that had never medaled at the rural state championships, much less a Western Interior Ski Meister Award.

On the final day of competition, Corey Ningeulook of Shishmaref, the 4.5-kilometer ski race gold medalist, would use a faster relay split to outlast biathlon gold medalist Dominic Richardson (the only biathlete at the meet to "shoot clean," hitting 10 out 10 targets) of Saint Michael.

Ningeulook would also guide Shishmaref to its first team title. The team from Golovin, led by Hank Henry, and the team from Galena, led by double-bronze medalist Kaleb Korta, would go on to take second and third place, respectively.

The Western Interior Ski and Biathlon Championships is one of the largest biathlon events held in the United States each year. Participants in the biathlon ski twice around a 2.7-kilometer course, each time stopping at a shooting range where they find a 22-caliber rifle and a personal range safety officer waiting for them.

Just a few of the Western Interior Ski and Biathlon Championships competitors have access to established biathlon ranges and targets in their villages and small cities, so junior high competitors are allowed to shoot with a rest.

During each shooting bout, competitors take five shots in the prone position at 4.5-inch targets, which are placed 50 meters down range. Each missed shot results in the athlete performing a short, but time- and energy-consuming penalty lap.

Nenana's Chuck Hugny, a 21-year veteran of the event, served as the range safety manager for the 2010 championships. Two-time Olympic Biathlon Team member Rachel Steer was in attendance and provided the athletes with a biathlon clinic.

In 1986, the Western Interior Ski/Biathlon Association created an event that would allow skiers and biathletes from rural locations around the state to experience high level ski and biathlon competition. The resulting Western Interior Ski and Biathlon Championships are regarded as the rural state ski and biathlon championships.

WISA has four spots reserved on the Arctic Winter Games teams for winners of its biathlon competition. Next year is an Arctic Winter Games qualification year for the Western Interior Ski/Biathlon Championships. The event will be held in White Mountain.

Obama OK's drilling in Alaska outer continental shelf

By Diana Haecker

The Obama administration got a mixed bag of reactions when on March 31 Department of Interior Secretary Ken Salazar announced a decision to allow existing leases in the Chukchi and Beaufort Seas to remain open but to cancel planned lease sales in the Bristol Bay region so the federal government can further study the impact on the environment and oil-spill risks.

This was part of a broader decision by Salazar on the current and proposed 5-year Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas leasing programs and includes the green light to drilling in the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico. Alaska Senators Lisa Murkowski and Mark Begich released a joint press release saying they appreciate the administration's effort to keep the existing leases open – some fetching record amounts when bid on in 2008 - but urged the administration to continue to fund environmental studies in the North Aleutian Basin so that a more informed decision can be made about possible development in the future.

Murkowski maintains that drilling for domestic oil is a national security issue. "Even as we transform America's energy landscape, we're going to need a lot of oil for many years. For the sake of our nation's economy, our national security, and for the world's environment, the more of that oil we can produce domestically the better," Murkowski said.

The plan allows exploratory activity in the Chukchi and Beaufort seas; delays four planned sales in the same areas and suspends leasing activity in the North Aleutian Basin. While Murkowski didn't comment on the president's decision to keep Bristol Bay off limits for drilling, Begich

Does folic acid increase risk of cancer?

By Bob Lawrence, MD Alaska Family Doctor

Some patients have been concerned about new data showing a possible link between folic acid supplementation and an increased risk of cancer. The issue was brought to light last year in a study out of Norway that found patients taking folic acid in mega-doses were more likely to develop certain cancers than those who did not take supplements.

The increased risk is low and does not outweigh the clear benefit of dietary folic acid, especially in women of childbearing age, but the research may be important to patients who are required to take high doses of folic acid as part of treatment for a chronic disease.

Grains and cereals in the United States have been fortified with folic acid since 1998 as part of a largely successful effort to reduce birth defects. Folic acid, along with other B vitamins, has also been investigated as a means of lowering the risk of cardiovascular disease and certain cancers. It was a study on cardiovascular disease risk reduction that raised concerns about the harmful effects of folic acid taken in high doses.

The study, published in the November 18 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) reviewed 6,837 heart patients from two studies in Norway conducted from 1998 to 2005. Patients in these studies were given 800 micrograms of folic acid daily (twice the recommended daily allowance) for a little over three years and compared to similar patients who took only a placebo. Researchers found that 10 percent of patients taking folate developed cancer whereas only 8.4 percent of patients who received a placebo developed cancer. This represented a 21 percent increase in cancer, particularly lung cancer, for those taking folic acid.

The study raises questions about the safety of folic acid in high doses and may be confusing, if not concerning, to people who are prescribed folic acid or who take folic acid as part of a daily supplement. So here is a little perspective:

First, folic acid, also called folate or B9, is one of the B vitamins known to be vital for healthy cell growth. A nutritional deficiency of folate can lead to severe forms of anemia in adults and severe birth defects in the brain and spine of children. Fortification of the food supply has helped lower the rate of birth defects in the United States. The recommended daily allowance of folic acid in the U.S. diet is 400 micrograms. At this recommended dose, folic acid may also reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease and certain cancers, like breast and colon cancer. Patients in the Norway studies were given twice this recommended amount.

Second, the Norway researchers point out that folic acid is not necessarily the cause of cancer, but rather folic acid may induce an acceleration phenomenon, meaning it causes a rapid growth of cancer that is already present. Patients at increased risk for developing cancer due to family history or cancer-causing behaviors, like tobacco use, will want to review this information with their provider before taking high doses of folic acid.

Third, folic acid taken in high doses is important for some patients who take medication that competes with folate in the body or causes a loss of folic acid from the body. For example, patients taking methotrexate for rheumatoid arthritis or psoriasis must supplement their diet with high dose folic acid to avoid the effects of folate deficiency. Doctors will sometimes prescribe supplemental folic acid for patients taking certain seizure medications or blood pressure medications called diuretics. The benefit of replacing folic acid in these cases far outweighs the relatively small increased risk of cancer seen in the Norway study.

Finally, it is important to remember that the most important sources of folic acid do not come from medication, but are found in vegetables, beans, and fortified breads. Spinach, broccoli, lentils, lima beans, asparagus, and fortified whole grain breads each provide 25-30 percent of the daily recommended amount of folic acid in each serving. Many fortified cereals have 100 percent of the recommended allowance per serving. There is little, if any, need to worry about acquiring cancer from healthy dietary sources of folic acid, and women of childbearing age should ensure they are getting the recommended 400 micrograms daily.

Until more is known about the effects of folic acid in doses over 400 micrograms, patients at increased risk of cancer, especially lung cancer, should confer with their provider before taking high-dose folic acid supplements.

said that it would make sense to curtail oil and gas development in Bristol Bay, the site of the world's largest salmon fishery.

The most enthusiastic reaction to the federal OCS plan came from a coalition of Native and fishery-related organizations. The Alaska Marine Conservation Council, Alaska Independent Fishermen's Marketing Assoc., Nunamta Aulukestai and the Bering Sea Fishermen's Association called the decision an important victory for the Bristol Bay's residents and Alaska's fishermen who depend upon the continued health of the region's fisheries and have been battling offshore oil and gas proposals for over 20 years. David Harsila,

President of the Alaska Independent Fishermen's Marketing Association wants to go further and get permanent protection. "Bristol Bay's salmon resource is like no other on Earth and provides thousands of jobs to fishermen across Alaska and the west coast," Harsila said. "Our organization and hundreds of member fishermen are thrilled with this decision, but want to see something permanent so we don't have to fight this battle again."

Congressman Don Young didn't share the Bristol Bay region's enthusiasm and used strong language bashing the five-year plan and the moratorium on drilling in certain parts. "While I appreciate the President's seeming departure from his extreme environmental left supporters, all I'm seeing in this exploration 'plan' is smoke and mirrors," said Young. "The President is saying all of the right things but actions speak much louder than words, and this new 'plan' is just a continuation of this Administration's inaction on making the United States energy independent; it will do nothing to end our dependence on foreign oil and nothing to end the export of billions of dollars we send overseas every

Young was not happy about the plan and said that subjecting previously studied areas to even more study would be a waste of taxpayer all oil and gas development to a loss of jobs.

Parnell said that an estimated 25 billion barrels of oil and 120 trillion time and dollars. "This plan closes more than it opens, and is a complete farce. There is no question that this 'Obama Moratorium' will have dire impacts on the economic future of our country," Young said.

Alaska Governor Sean Parnell also expressed concern with the oil and gas-leasing plan. He criticized the uncertainty about future OCS leasing in Alaska and links the president's reservation to fling the door open to cubic feet of natural gas could be potentially found and if not developed, economic doomsday would be the consequence. "By not maintaining a predictable lease program in the Alaska OCS, 35,000 job opportunities are still unavailable to Alaskans, the cost of energy will go up, and the U.S. will continue to depend on imported oil. At a time when the U.S. economy is weak, we need high-paying jobs associated with the development and use of domestic petroleum and the increased energy security that come from Alaska production," said Parnell.

Parnell announced he would file strong comments on behalf of Alaska in the 30-day public comment period to the plan. Alaska state senator Lesil McGuire, the chair of the Senate Energy Committee and co-chair of the Senate Resources Committee, said that she appreciated that Alaskan voices were heard, but also took the position to allow more drilling. "We, as state legislators, often feel very powerless when it comes to dealing with the Federal Government, so I was happy to hear that some of the concerns we voiced were considered by the President," she said. McGuire said,"The ability to develop Alaska's offshore resources is imperative to our energy future."

On the other side of the spectrum of reactions, the environmental group Center for Biological diversity called the plan a disaster for wildlife and climate. Brendan Cummings, senior counsel at the Center for Biological Diversity said that the plan will further feed the nation's addiction to oil, will contribute to global warming is poised to directly despoil the habitat of polar bears, endangered whales, and other imperiled wildlife. The group said that oil development in the Beaufort and Chukchi seas, home to all of America's polar bears, is strongly opposed by conservation groups, as no technologies exist to clean up oil spills in icy waters.

The revision of the 5-year plan came as a response to a lawsuit by three environmental groups and the village of Point Hope. A federal appeals court ruled that the Interior Department under the Bush administration did not properly study the environmental impact of expanding oil and gas drilling off Alaska's coast before issuing its five-year leasing program.

Obituary

Doris Susan "Kayaqtuq" Lincoln

Doris Susan "Kayaqtuq" Lincoln, 80, died Feb. 27 in Kotzebue. Her family wrote that "She left this earth."

A funeral was held March 4 at the Kotzebue Friends Church, and burial followed at the Catholic cemetery, where she was laid to rest next to her husband, Rodney Lincoln, Sr.

A kind and respected elder of Kotzebue, Doris was born Dec. 3, 1929 in Golovin to John and Minnie Fagerstrom.

Growing up on the shores of Golovin Bay gave Doris a deep appreciation for her Inupiat culture. Doris left Alaska to complete her education, graduating from Roosevelt High School in Seattle, where she met and married Rodney Lincoln. The couple made Kotzebue their home and raised six children: Rodney "Butch" Jr., Blanche "Bebix," Linda, Richard, Dood and Omie.

Doris was proud to live and practice her culture. She constantly made efforts to blend the Inupiat ways of life with the 20th- and 21st-century style of living. Doris enjoyed fishing on Kobuk Lake, bird hunting on the Noatak, picking greens and berries, skin sewing and doll making. She enjoyed gathering and preparing local delicacies that include Native seafoods, waterfowl, berries and small and big game.

Doris was devoted to her family and honored to be a wife, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother. Her family in return showered her with the same love, respect and affection.

Doris is survived by her sisters, Myrtle Johnson of Nome and Maggie Olson of Golovin; and brother, Jerry Fagerstrom of Minnesota; and her children, Victor Karmun (stepson), Linda and Roger Mauer, Richard Lincoln, Dood and fiance Joe Carr, and Omie and Bob McGuffey. She is also survived by numerous grandchildren, Nancy Campos, Sandra Motter, and Douglas "Chip" Fields, Rodney "Butch" Lincoln III, Anthony Edward Lincoln, Allison Lincoln, Marley P. Lincoln, Donald Schaeffer Lincoln, Quentin Allen Upicksoun, Scott E. Upicksoun, Charles Peter Upicksoun, Hilary Joyce Upicksoun, John Fagerstrom

Lincoln, Meagan Carol Lincoln, Doris Rose Lincoln, Anna Lucille Lincoln, Duke W. McGuffey, and Niki Blu McGuffey; and greatgrandchildren, Rodney Uan IV and James Davena Lincoln, Ida Lee Lincoln, Tristen Jay Lincoln, Tyler Huntington, and Trent and Sadie Ellison, Duke Axle McGuffey, and Christina, Loren, Danielle, Laura and Devin Fields; and her dear friend, Ida Hadley.

Doris was preceded in death by her parents, John and Minnie Fagerstrom; husband, Rodney Lincoln Sr.; children, Rodney Jr. "Butch," Blanche "Bebix"; step-daughter, Meda Sheldon; and eight siblings, Ruth, Gladys, Jack, Chuck and Floyd Fagerstrom, Joyce Tucker, Rose Jones and Ernest Burgh; and her dear friends, Ida Richards, Ida Evern, Marie Fields and Marian Davidovics.

The family and friends mourn the passing of this cherished and esteemed elder of the Kotzebue community. She will be greatly missed by all who knew her.
