ALASKA FEDERATION OF NATIVES CONVENTION— The King Island Dancers and Drummers performed for AFN delegates on Saturday, the final day of this year's AFN convention.

Bye, bye Wien Building

By Sandra L. Medearis

Nome's favorite eyesore came cracking and splintering down under attack from City of Nome public works excavators Tuesday morning. Demolition started just before 10 a.m. The building was firewood in less than an hour, satisfying a ruling by Nome Common Council that saving the building was no longer on the table.

Public works parked heavy equipment at the ready on Monday night to begin to demolish the derelict Wien Building Tuesday at first light. Mark Sackett, who bought the building for one dollar—actually four quarters—and employees worked under floodlights late into the night salvaging windows from the doomed building.

The demolition to abate the building had been scheduled for Oct. 11.

However, last Friday City Manager Josie Bahnke told the Nugget that foul weather, a late fuel barge and work to close Port of Nome early before pending ice tied up crews and trumped the demolition schedule.

Other buildings, long on the abatement list as threats to safety and health, would also come down this week.

Tuesday morning, Bahnke cheered the Front Street beautification project with Allen Maxwell, building inspector.

She shared pieces of her birthday cake with passers-by who cheered when the building went flat.

AFN seeks federal legislation to protect hunting and fishing rights

Senator Murkowski promises Congressional hearing on subsistence issues

By Laurie McNicholas

Alaska Natives made a strong bid for new federal legislation to restore and protect their hunting, fishing and gathering rights at the Alaska Federation of Natives annual convention Oct. 18-20 at the Dena'ina Center in Anchorage.

Subsistence topped a list of 13 pressing issues preselected by tribal leaders throughout Alaska for a tribal conference hosted by AFN and the National Congress of American Indians on Oct. 17 at the Alaska Native Heritage Center in Anchorage.

The forum included a lively question and answer exchange among tribal leaders, most members of Gov. Sean Parnell's cabinet and staff representing all members of Alaska's Congressional delegation, according to Edward Thomas, president of the Central Council of Tlingit and Indian Tribes of Alaska.

In a report to AFN convention delegates, Thomas said suggestions for solving subsistence problems took most of the time available for a strategy session at the tribal forum. Participants called for repealing the section of the 1971 Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA) that extinguished the aboriginal hunting and fishing rights of Alaska Natives.

Thomas said the forum had only enough time to address the second highest priority, energy and the high cost of living, before the meeting was adjourned at 4 p.m. so attendees could go to a subsistence rally at the Delaney Parkstrip in downtown Anchorage.

On the following day, Alaska Natives brought clear goals and an action plan for solving subsistence

Nome Volunteer Fire Department celebrates first 75 years

By Sandra L. Medearis

Part One of a three-part series

The Nome Volunteer Fire Dept. put on a grand gathering Saturday night as they celebrated 75 years of volunteer efforts to save lives, put out fires, conduct search and rescue operations, respond to hazardous material, and continually train to keep the community safe.

The gathering at the Nome Rec Center's town gymnasium featured the pomp and circumstance of acknowledging years of service, the comfort of sitting down to a white table cloth dinner with family and friends, and renewing acquaintances with honored guests who have been pillars of the department in earlier days.

The celebration was a hometown affair, planned and put on by the members of the department. Nome-Beltz High School Choir sang "The Star Spangled Banner." Nome Chef Tim Stettinger cooked for a dozen hours, finishing the prime rib-halibut dinner just before the pledge of allegiance. For dessert, Linda Steiger decorated a table of large cakes in a NVFD theme featuring miniature vintage fire engines and the NVFD emblem. Al Burgo put on some tunes. The band "Usual Suspects" played for some serious cutting of the dance floor after dinner. NVFD officers Chief Matt Johnson, Jerry Steiger, Kevin Knowlton, Warren Little and others acknowledged the contributions of many years of volunteerism and public service.

Dear Nancy,

I just wanted to express my sincere delight on the stellar performance by the Taparmiut Drummers & Dancers during AFN 2012. I also want to thank Morris Nashoanak Sr. for allowing those of us who do not fully reside physically in Stebbins to have been part of this seemingly once in a lifetime opportunity.

Everyone who participated showed excellent professionalism and were nothing shy of outstanding representation of our beautiful Yup'ik culture. The young ladies in high school were catapulted to the front of the stage during the performance by their elders. This showed such an enormous amount of support for our youth that could not be duplicated any other way.

The dialog and conversations that were held just before the performance was handled in such a cooperative and cohesive way, everyone seemed so excited and happy. I myself was overjoyed that Stebbins was even in Anchorage, let alone back stage ready to perform for the entire world to see.

I cannot amplify my gratitude to everyone who funded and supported this group. As a community, Stebbins should be proud of this group, the leaders, the fundraisers and all that contributed to make this trip possible. This was and is an excellent example of teamwork, leadership and dedication to fulfilling a goal by the members of this community.

I encourage the community of Stebbins to dream big and set goals, because as a team, anything can be achieved. Thank you so very much.

To the Editor:

What kind of culture are we creating for future generations? The 10/18 edition of Nome Nugget has some beautiful photography and the smiles are great. There is a negative tone towards the offshore mining and the reporting is highlighting misfortunes in the industry. This is a difficult business and no mention of the large amount of revenues these brave people bring into this remote community. A positive trend. I see no negative reporting surrounding the alcoholic status quo in this community despite the known destruction of family cohesion and individual integrity by rampant alcohol consumption. There are 21 reports of alcohol or substance abuse on the local police blotter yet not one of these stories made it to the front page because this is business as usual for Nome. Nothing about how more lives are permanently altered because of last week's abuse. The amount of tax revenues received from alcohol sales last year doesn't come anywhere near what it cost to just apprehend the abusers let alone jailing them and treating them for what ultimately becomes a permanent medical problem. How are these costs being paid for? The status quo offers a bar and liquor store to smooth out the problem making a few individuals rich. This is the culture Nome lives in. It has been this way for over 112 years and counting. Is this a good example for the children? One of the more interesting reads in your paper is "A Look at the Past." How about a more positive look at our future? What kind of culture are we creating for future generations.

Déja vu All Over Again

Norton Sound Health Corporation fired another CEO last week, just like a year ago, and again before that and yet again and again before that. It's become an annual event for the past several years. It's an old story and something is radically wrong with this situation. The Norton Sound Region has a hospital board with the Red Queen yelling, "Off with their heads."

Norton Sound Health Corporation has no leadership. It's like a car racing downhill with no steering wheel. The NSHC board is suffering from an outrageous abuse of power and petty reactions. A casual observer would wonder how so many board members could do so much damage. One would hope it could clean its own house, reduce its unwieldy size and get serious about the business of providing a high level of professionalism and reliable service to all the citizens of this area. It's health care, not just payroll that should be the goal of NSHC.

Good health is a community concern. We are all here together and as we move into a brand new hospital facility we need steering and guidance for the process. We also need to get past the reputation for unstable leadership. We can't afford to continue with irrational behavior. Let's have some professionalism and stop the revolving door of CEOs. We need stability. —N.L.M.—

A Last Look at the Past: The 1900 Nome Gold Rush

By Laura Samuelson, Director, Carrie M. McLain Memorial Museum
For the past 21 weeks of Nome's brief summer, the Carrie M. McLain Memorial Museum has been pleased to present the diary of Wilfred A. McDaniel Sr. Wilfred and his brother Ed were two of the 20,000 Argonauts who streamed to the Nome Gold Rush in 1900. The Museum offered Wilfred's insights as an unabridged seat of the pants blueprint of what the dredgers and beach miners could expect mining for gold in 2012 Nome, Alaska. We are grateful to Wilfred's daughter Irene McDaniel and her spouse, Robert Johnson as well as son Wilfred Jr. and Lois McDaniel who donated the photographs, writings and artifacts collected between 1899 and 1907. The family preserved and protected Wilfred's legacy for 93 years until the collection was donated to the people of Nome in 2001.

We conclude our series with a burning question: Should the boys stay in Nome or go south for the winter? Brother Ed voted with his gold nuggets and bought two tickets to San Francisco on the Senator. They had two days to close up camp and high tail it to Nome...

Alaska beckons
By Wilfred A. McDaniel

On the morning of the 25th, the tent was taken down and with stove and cooking utensils, was cached with our other possessions. In the afternoon, carrying our luggage and blanket rolls, we rushed into Nome. The town was alive with the great influx of miners from the creeks and distant points, some making preparations for the long winter, others, like ourselves, arranging transportation to "The Outside." Many were utterly discouraged, others in high spirits, according to the smiles of the Goddess Fortune!

On the evening of the 25th, from the heaving deck of the Senator, we saw the twinkling lights of Nome gradually fade away, as the Senator turned her bow southward, and it was with a feeling of regret that we saw the last gleam dim out, as the mists closed in.

Thoughts soon turn to the more comfortable prospects ahead in sunny California, and home, together with future plans for the coming spring, when the call of the North would lure us back to that desolate, but fascinating land!

So, dear miners of the golden sands of 2012 Nome, heed Wilfred McDaniels' advice from 1900. It's time for Nomeites to head into eight months of the frozen Arctic winter and it's time for many of you to head south to warmer climes.

Until we meet again, we wish you happy trails and a drier summer in 2013!

formation to voters and readers of the Nome Nugget newspaper.

I was a member of the committee to select the replacement of our District's state representative, Richard Foster, when he passed away. Now, because of redistricting, our choice, Neal Foster, no longer represents the Bethel/Wade Hampton area.

The choice for your new District, in my opinion, is clear: David Guttenberg. Representative Guttenberg, even before redistricting was and continues to be a champion for those of us who live in rural areas, on and off the road system. Even before the new District maps were on the drawing board, Representative Guttenberg, as both a state Representative and as a Democratic party leader, was a very strong voice to ensure members of all areas of our District had seats at the selection committee table.

Like you, for years I have watched Rep. Guttenberg on Gavel to Gavel and have witnessed his dedication to our issues, real people issues both social and monetary, for both rural and urban citizens. For over 20 years, I have interacted with him in person, by phone, and by email and have found him ALWAYS responsive to my concerns. He (and his staff) listens, actively seeks input from all sides, and weighs the information before acting and voting on issues.

Even before his first election to the state House, Representative Guttenberg was a strong and active supporter of Coastal Zone Management and was an outspoken advocate for the recent Ballot Initiative to reestablish it into law.

I live in Nome so I can't vote for Representative Guttenberg but if I lived in his District, I absolutely would.

Sincerely,
Jana Varrati

To the editor,

Last Monday, Dan Harrelson was on the witness stand in the Kotzebue Superior Court, having been sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, complaining about my letters published in the Nugget. Dan told the court that I lied when I said in my September 20, 2012 letter that NSEDC paid him $425 an hour.

When I went back and double-checked the records, it turns out that I did make an error in my hourly rate calculation.

Dan got paid for 25 hours per week during 2007, not 5 hours. During 2008, he was paid $118,909 for working five hours per week, which is $457.34 per hour. During 2009 he worked five hours per week for $111,763 which is $429.86 per hour and during 2010, NSEDC paid him $109,348 for working five hours per week which is $420.57 per hour. The 2011 report isn't out yet.

Therefore, my sentence should have read, during the three years from 2008-10; Dan Harrelson was paid $340,020 by NSEDC for working five hours per week, which works out to $435.92 per hour. That's good pay.

How much Dan gets paid is reported every year to the IRS in Part VII of NSEDC's income tax returns. If you want to check for yourself, NSEDC is required by the IRS code to make its income tax returns available for public inspection. You can stop by their office and ask to see them.

The letter in the October 18, 2012 Nugget by former Norton Sound Hospital CEO Deven Parlikar was sad and prophetic. His comments about discriminatory corporate governance and retribution apply just as well to NSEDC. I don't know Devon or the specific facts leading to his firing but what he describes is an all too familiar story out here. Unfairness and discrimination in the management of the public institutions that Congress created to help people in the bush prevents them from achieving their full potential and that hurts everybody.

Forty years after ANCSA, we still haven't found a way to govern the corporations Ted Stevens created in a nondiscriminatory way. Uncle Ted had an amazing ability to squeeze money out of Congress for programs to improve life in rural Alaska but he didn't give us much guidance on how we were supposed to run these government created monopolies and treat people fairly at the same time.

I want to repeat the quote from Martin Luther King, "In the end, we will remember not the words of our enemies, but the silence of our friends." I understand why people keep their mouths shut. They have reason for being afraid. There will be retaliation against them for speaking up but there is a huge cost in sitting silent. Outsiders aren't going to make governance of our publicly owned corporations better for us. A big problem is that nobody really knows how to do it yet but doing nothing, and acquiescing to the dysfunctionality that we live with today will be a serious failure in our responsibility to future generations. As Sky Starkey told AFN last week, "Other people can't be in charge of managing your life."

problems to an AFN workshop on “Food Security and Management of Subsistence Resources” moderated by Rosita Worl, president, Sealaska Heritage Institute, and Myron Naneng, president, Association of Village Council Presidents.

The goals are: “(1) Full and lasting federal protections for our hunting, fishing and gathering way of life, and (2) A co-equal role in managing the fish, wildlife and other renewable resources that we rely upon for our economic and cultural existence.”

Leading action plan items include (1) advocating to revoke ANCSA’s extinguishment of aboriginal hunting and fishing rights; (2) seeking federal legislation to restore and protect Native hunting and fishing rights in Alaska, beginning with a Congressional oversight hearing on the status of Native rights to food security and self-determination; and (3) seeking legislative, administrative and policy changes to mandate a meaningful role for Alaska Natives in the federal management program, including tribal compacting and contracting of significant aspects of the federal management program to tribal organizations.

Why legislation is needed

A proclamation accompanying the goals and action plan to address subsistence problems says when ANCSA was enacted, Congress emphasized that it expected both the State of Alaska and the Secretary of the Interior to take any action necessary to protect the subsistence needs of the Natives.

“Alaska’s expanding population increased competition for fish and game” reads the proclamation. “Neither the State nor the Secretary of the Interior fulfilled Congress’ expectation that Native subsistence would be protected. Congress moved to protect the subsistence way of Alaska Natives and enacted Title VIII of the Alaska National Interest Land Conservation Act (ANILCA).

Again, our leaders pressed for explicit protection of ‘Native’ hunting and fishing rights, but the State objected. Ultimately a law was crafted to provide a subsistence priority for ‘rural residents’ with the expectation that the State would enact laws that conformed to federal requirements. Regrettably, Congress’ goal of ensuring the continuation of Alaska Natives’ customary and traditional way of life was dealt a death blow in 1990, when the Alaska Supreme Court declared the State’s rural priority law unconstitutional.”

The outcome of the court’s decision led to 20 years of dual federal and State management. The proclamation cites the following evidence that ANILCA has failed to protect the Native subsistence way of life: Subsistence harvests have been marginalized by other uses and ineffective management, Native Alaskans have been criminalized for feeding their families and communities, and they have been penalized for practicing their ancient traditions.

Current subsistence conflicts

Workshop panelist Kathryn Martin, vice president of land and resources for Athna Inc., said her corporation has 1,700 shareholders and the number is growing due to open enrollment. People from around the world are descending on Ahtna’s land to hunt and to fish for Copper River red salmon, and shareholders fear for their physical safety while hunting, she noted. Much of the corporation’s lands are accessible by highway. Ahtna established a land protection program seven years ago, Martin added.

Martin said Ahtna’s fight for shareholders’ hunting and fishing rights is waged silently and alone. “The federal government has taken the easy way out by passively adopting state regulations,” she added.

Naneng noted disastrous declines in the numbers of Chinook salmon returning to the Yukon and Kuskokwim rivers. He said citations issued this year to subsistence fishermen for fishing during a closure are still pending, and some have been reduced to infractions. He said the State seems to be making an effort to get the fishermen to plead out to a crime for getting food.

In a pretrial conference held Oct. 16, the fishermen refused the State’s plea deals and opted for trials rather than plead guilty for subsistence fishing for their families, according to a report by Angela Denning-Barnes for KYUK radio in Bethel.

She said the State reduced charges against 22 of the fishermen because their crime was limited to fishing with the wrong net size. They are being represented free of charge by the Northern Justice Project, a private law firm focusing on civil rights issues, she added.

Denning-Barnes said several others who fished on June 20 during a 12-day closure as part of an organized effort by several Kuskokwim villages are charged with misdemeanors for other fishing violations and are represented by public defenders. She said each fisherman will be tried separately in trials beginning Oct. 29 in Bethel District Court.

Naneng told workshop participants that Sen. Lisa Murkowski visited Bethel early this month and said a Senate oversight hearing on subsistence will be held this winter in Bethel or elsewhere in Alaska. “As soon as we know, we’ll tell you,” he said.

Senator Murkowski confirmed her plans for a Senate hearing on subsistence during an open dialogue with convention delegates that she and Congressmen Don Young conducted on Friday afternoon. “I will commit to you we will have a hearing on subsistence,” she stated. She said she doesn’t yet know whether the hearing will be held in Washington, D.C., or whether it will be conducted by the Indian Affairs committee, Energy committee or Commerce committee.

Young acknowledged the subsistence issue has festered for a long time. He said he prefers that Alaska Natives and the State be involved rather than the federal government. He said he thinks a Yukon River council involving every Yukon River village should be formed to address salmon management. Young urged convention delegates to seek fish and game management authority on their own lands—the 44 million acres of land allocated to Alaska Natives under ANCSA.

AFN convention delegates adopted resolutions calling for the establishment of inter-tribal and Alaska Native fish commissions; for a Congressional oversight hearing on self-determination, including Alaska Native hunting and fishing rights; for funds from the Alaska Legislature for essential research on

Halloween event aims to help feed the hungry

By Diana Haecker

The Nome Community Center along with the City of Nome Parks and Recreation department teamed up to organize a new Halloween event in the absence of the “usual” D.A.W.N. Halloween Haunted House spectacle.

The D.A.W.N. event had been an institution for many years. Booths of games used to line the walls at the National Guard Armory; Nomeites dressed as outhouses, vampires and all sorts of hideous creatures competed in costume contests.

The event was organized by a group of volunteers centered around D.A.W.N. aka “Drugs Aren’t Wanted in Nome” but the glue that held them together disintegrated with the passing of the group’s, founder Connie Madden.

Todd Hindman is the lone person still involved with D.A.W.N. He said while the non-profit still exists, the organization only puts on the SouperBowl event to raise money for the improvement of East End Park and to support other groups focusing on kid’s activities. “Instead of organizing individual events for kids, we raise money for activities that kids are involved in,” Hindman said.

D.A.W.N. supported a Nome swimming program, the Native Youth Olympics and the Nome-Beltz Drama Club, to name a few. For the past three years, Hindman had a hard time finding people interested in helping with the Halloween event, but Nome Community Center’s Danielle Sylvester had been actively involved in youth activities and picked up where D.A.W.N. left off.

Together with Jeremy Master from the City’s Rec Center, she is now organizing a Halloween Family Fun Night at the Nome Rec Center.

“It won’t be the carnival that D.A.W.N. put on,” Sylvester said.

There won’t be any booths with games, but there will be a Haunted Walk outside the Rec Center and a lot of fun activities inside, Sylvester said. “We plan on three guided walks at different times, but they might be a bit scary for the younger kids.”

Inside the Rec Center, there will be creepy stations and scary feeler boxes; the movie “Hokus Pokus” will be playing throughout the evening and, yes, there will be a costume contest.

In one of the side rooms, a fortune teller will do her best to predict the future and in another room, there will be a scary story teller.

In addition, a bounce house will be set up. Norton Sound Health Corp.’s injury prevention program is planning on ironing reflective tape on people’s jackets.

The price of admission is a can of food.

Food Bank director Paula Davis has been struggling to keep some food on the Food Bank’s shelves that were stripped almost bare this summer. The Halloween event has traditionally been the biggest fund and food-raiser for the Food Bank. Especially this year, the donations are much needed.

Davis said that this summer was busier than before. More people than ever used the services of the Food Bank. Davis said that the Food Bank served 217 people in June 2011. That number jumped to 246 in June 2012.

She noticed a lot of out-of-town “clients” were using the Food Bank, especially seasonal miners who spent the summer in Nome.

Davis said if it weren’t for the frequent donations of bulk and left-over food by the research boats that anchor in Nome and restock here, she would have had a hard time handing out food to folks.

The Food Bank of Alaska sends food to Nome on a regular basis.

Strict rules apply on how and how often it is given out to people. A single person gets just as much as a family of three.

Davis said it depletes resources quickly when single men, who do appear to share living quarters and transportation, each claim their full allotment under Food Bank rules:

one bag of staple foods like rice, corn or oatmeal per month. Food donated from local sources does not have to be accounted for as strictly as goods coming in from the government.

About 20 local families are signed up to receive food at the Food Bank.

Davis said that summer was the busiest time for the Food Bank. The least busy times are the months of January, February and March.

Locally donated food, Davis said, can just be handed out whenever it’s there.

Now, those shelves are empty.

This, she hopes, will be remedied with the upcoming Halloween Fun Night at the Rec Center, where admission is a can of food to keep up the tradition.

Emergency responders discuss food shortage in case of emergency events

By Diana Haecker

Back in the days, when food arrived in bulk via barge, Nomeites stocked up on canned goods or bulk and were never caught going hungry during emergency events such as violent fall storms.

Nowadays, the shelves in the stores empty out pretty fast when Nome is cut off from jet air traffic for a few days, as was the case during a spell of bad, rainy and foggy weather during the closure of the main runway in August.

DOT&PF Nome Airport manager Bob Madden said during last week's Local Emergency Planning Commission meeting that roughly 100,000 pounds of freight come to Nome on a daily basis. If the pattern is disrupted, the local grocery stores are not getting the groceries to restock their shelves. And that means that people used to go shopping on an as-needed basis, don't get their groceries. "We don't stock food as we used to," said Madden.

"When we had bad weather and the runway closure, the event precluded jets from coming in and pretty soon we had half a million pounds of freight sitting in Anchorage," Madden said.

LEPC chair Tom Vaden also reported back from an emergency preparedness conference held in early October that focused on lessons learned from the 2011 tornado disaster in Joplin, Missouri. An EF-5 tornado hit the town of 50,000 souls in May 2011, leaving at least 116 people dead and a six-mile swath roughly half a mile wide. A hospital was destroyed, another severely damaged.

Vaden said that the tornado turned the city into rubble, leaving people without any recognizable streets or direction, making it hard for first responders to get to people for help.

While a tornado is not likely to happen here in the Nome area, Vaden said, there are potentially two catastrophic events that could strike in Nome: a tidal wave and ashfall from a volcano eruption. The latter would mean that air traffic to and from Nome would be interrupted and hence no groceries or goods would be arriving.

Vaden reminded the commission to put the word out that people should have enough of the necessary groceries, fresh water and medications to last for three to seven days in an emergency.

He added that the problem for smaller communities around Nome is exacerbated if cargo doesn't make it into Nome, it most certainly won't make it to the villages.

Vaden reminded the first responders of a training exercise with the scenario of an active shooter on Oct.

23. Airport manager Bob Madden added that there is an airport table top emergency training exercise scheduled for Oct. 29, simulating a disaster at the airport.

CHIEF'S NOTES

By John Papasodora
Nome Police Chief

I have been living and working in Nome as your Chief of Police now for a little over three years. By Nome standards, that still makes me a newcomer, but I've grown to respect our community for the solid core values that don't exist in so many other places. Nome is a place where people care and will get involved. Countless times, we've received calls about people who are in distress, who are depressed, or just need some help getting through a tough time, and we have never failed to find someone who was willing to step in and make sure that they had what they needed. That is a sense of community and selfless giving that is rare these days. The people of Nome should be proud for who they are, what they stand for, and the values they hold dear.

Every once in a while, those values get taken advantage of. There are many good people out there who just want to do the right things for the right reasons. They give and want nothing in return. My friend Charlie Painter is such a person. He is consistently the 'nicest' guy you would want to know. You can see Charlie at the Post Office or around town. He always has a chuckle, a grin or will give the little extra effort to make a situation work. I spent a lot of time working with Charlie rebuilding the hockey rink and got to know him a bit. He is a hard worker and dedicated to giving the kids in the community a great place to play and learn skills that promote a healthy lifestyle. As a group, the NHL (Nome Hockey League) gives a lot to make the rink work — purely as volunteers. On the weekends, you can see up to 40 young children playing on the ice. It gives us all value to see kids enjoying themselves, playing outside, and getting exercise. But Charlie gives quite a bit more than anyone else.

Last week, we had our first ever burglary reported at the hockey building. I was in Anchorage at the time when I received a text from Charlie. He had gone over to the rink to work on a few projects that we had going and found that someone broke into the hockey building and stole his miter saw, his drill, Wilson Bourdon's drills and my personal drill. I was shocked! Though I have the general reality view of most law enforcement officers who have been doing the job for 27 plus years, I never had a clue that anyone would ever break into the hockey building and steal the tools being used by volunteers to do something good for the community. This was not the Nome that I have grown to admire and I could only think that this couldn't have been done by anyone from Nome. I hope that as we investigate this crime, that I am proven right and that the ideals of the community haven't changed so drastically that this kind of behavior will be tolerated.

But what was amazing about the whole thing was Charlie's reaction. He wasn't concerned about his stuff — he was concerned because someone else's stuff was gone. He told me, "I hope they needed the saw and will put it to good use." Quite an attitude for a fellow that just lost a $300 miter saw and $100 drill set.

The message here is that Nome is a great community where if someone needs something, they just need to ask. Most of us will gladly give or loan so that people can have what they need. But please pay attention because the old ways may be changing. We may be coming to the point where you have to live like you're in the big city — watching your stuff all

Nanooks wrestlers win five first place finishes at Bush Brawl

By Stephen Palmatier
The Nanooks, coming off their slow season debut two weeks ago at home in the Nome Inviational, looked for improvement away from their own surroundings. Last weekend, they did just that. The Nanooks got five first place finishes, two of them in the junior high level and three in the high school level.

The Nanooks, who had two champions with Emery Booshu and James Horner in their home tournament, showed that they had some top wrestlers but needed to prove that they were a well-balanced wrestling team.

The Nanooks came out with champions in the junior high 120-pound weight class in Josh Cannon and Timothy James in the 130-pound class. For high school, they had Alex Grey take the title in the 98-pound class, Leif Erikson in the 113-pound class and Emery Booshu in the 132-pound class. Since Booshu was the only Nanook champion two weeks ago at tournament in Nome, the wins were quite surprising.

The other champions for the high school weight classes were Colton Sieh of Kotzebue in the 106-pound class, Avery Chiklak of Bethel in the 120-class, Josh Mendenhall of Bethel in the 126-class, Gary Eakin of Kotzebue at 138-pounds, Scott Hansen of Kotzebue in the 145-pound class, Brayton Lieb of Bethel in the 152-class, Trevour Chavez of Bethel in the 160-pound class, Devon Phillips of Kotzebue in the 170-pound class, Issac Peacock of Kotzebue at 182-pounds, Shyler Johnson of Unalakleet at 195 pounds, Ben Voss of Barrow at 220-pounds, and Bruce Crow of Bethel in the 285-pound class.

The Nanooks also earned three second place finishes in the high school weight classes: Bobby Pate in the 106-pound class, Chris Harvey in the 160-pound class and Russell

Smith in the 220-pound class. Also, Nome got four third place finishes: one in the junior high level with Wilson Hoogendorn in the 105-pound class and three in high school, James Horner in the 138-pound level, Junyor Erikson in the 152-pound class and Joe Cross in the 170-pound class.

With Nome having earned three titles, third only to Bethel and Kotzebue with five each, and 12 third place or better finishes, the Nanooks have to be happy with their performance. It will be something that they can build on for the upcoming meets and the rest of the season. The Nanooks will not have quite the luxury of rest this week as they get right back into action this weekend at the ACS Tournament in Anchorage in what should be their toughest overall competition this season.

Unalakleet triumphs in Mixed-6 Tourney

By Stephen Palmatier
Do you enjoy watching teams having fun while competing? Do you enjoy seeing the chemistry of boys and girls playing on the same team? If you said 'Yes' to both, then you would have wanted to see the Nome Mixed-6 tournament, which took place last weekend. Unalakleet claimed the champions title, defeating Ambler in four sets.

A small but intense crowd cheered on teams from all over the region, including Unalakleet, Ambler, Nome, Brevig Mission, Elim and White Mountain.

The first evening of action consisted of pool play matches of two sets each after which they were divided into brackets.

Early on, Unalakleet, Ambler and Elim were the teams to make a mark for themselves, winning 6, 6 and 4 sets respectively, qualifying as the top three seeds in the bracket. Meanwhile, on the flip side, the two teams representing the home Nome squad, to want only a few sets total, qualifying near the bottom.

The next day, the tournament elimination games kicked off, then turned into 'best of 5' format, where Unalakleet defeated White Mountain in three sets, 25-12, 25-20, and 25-19. Ambler won also in straight sets against Elim, 25-12, 25-17, and 25-20. These matches set up the championship game between Ambler vs.

Unalakleet and the third place consolation game between White Mountain and Elim.

In the third place game, Elim took the first set, 25-13. After that, the match became very competitive as Elim took the second set, 29-27 and then dropped the third set, 13-25. However, after the poor third set of play, Elim was able to finish the deal, winning the fourth set convincingly, 25-9.

With Elim the third place finisher, all that was to be determined were the first and second place finishers. At first, it seemed that it might be Ambler as they took the opening set, 25-21. After the opening set however, Unalakleet turned it around as they came back to win three straight sets, 25-10, 25-17 and 25-12.

From the opening serve to the last strike of the ball, Unalakleet seemed to be the most dominant team in the tournament and the result showed it.

If nothing else, for some of the teams such as the Nome JV squad, it was a chance to play in competitive matches, which varsity games do not allow for. All eyes continue to be on the top seeded Lady Nanooks varsity squad who are scheduled to compete in the regional tournament in Barrow in two weeks.

Roseann Timbers and Stuart Dennis named to statewide Elders and Youth Council at AFN convention

By Laurie McNicholas

A new statewide Elders and Youth Council was created at the 2012 Elders and Youth Conference held Oct. 15-17 at the Dena'ina Civic and Convention Center in Anchorage. Elected to serve on the council for Bering Straits Native Corp. were Elder Representative Roseann Timbers and alternate Loretta Cox, and Youth Representative Stuart Dennis and alternate Andy Piscoya.

The conference theme was "Native Knowledge, Respecting and Owning Our Native Culture."

This year, a night of cultural celebration was included in the event for the first time.

Sponsored by the First Alaskans Institute, the conference drew about 1,200 registered participants from across Alaska.

Each participant was able to attend two of 18 workshops. Nine workshops ran concurrently in each of the first and second workshop sessions on Monday afternoon.

Seven workshops focused on health, wellness and safety activities.

One workshop focused on the healing power of stories and using digital media to tell stories.

Participants in separate workshop learned how to harvest, prepare and use medicinal plants.

A discussion of ways the Native community can improve and own the education system took place in one of five workshops on leadership and education. Elders and youth constructed their own rap based on the theme of respect and shared it with each other at one of four workshops on culture, values and language.

Participants in workshops on land, law and policy learned their rights as U.S. citizens and discussed a legal case related to their right to receive a free, effective education.

A popular community art project at the conference engaged passersby in adding paint to large canvases depicting individuals in traditional attire from five Native Alaskan groups—Aleut, Athabascan, Inupiat, Tlingit and Yupik. Yupik artist Philip Charette drew the portraits of persons whose photos were attached to the canvases. Charette was among featured speakers at the conference with an address titled, "Fostering a Lifelong Application and Commitment to Alaska Native Values."

Time was set aside for Men's and Women's Houses, a popular opportunity to discuss opportunities and challenges faced by each gender which was introduced at the 2011

Elders and Youth Conference.

Elder Carrie Herman said when she was growing up in Mekoryuk on Nunivak Island, men slept in a big log house where Elders talked to young men and taught them to make tools; women taught girls domestic skills in a little sod house.

Carrie and her husband, Sam Herman, were Elder keynote speakers at the conference.

The conference included language circles, breakout sessions for participants in eight language groups, Aleut, Alutiiq, Athabascan, Haida, Inupiaq, Tlingit, Tsimshian and Yup'ik.

Youth keynote speaker Peter Squartsoff said when he joined an Alutiiq circle at an Elders and Youth Conference three years ago, he found that no one knew the language or the past of his people.

"I was struck by how limited we are with our language," he said. "We lacked resources."

Peter said he returned to Port Lions and told an Alutiiq teacher that an Alutiiq songbook is needed. "I worked at it for two and one-half years," Peter noted. "I did not know a half note or a quarter note. Today I'm glad to say I've transcribed more than 42 songs, both traditional and modern, and some Yup'ik songs. I am an Alutiiq dancer and book writer."

"When I was growing up, my father told me, 'Provide for your people, help your community,'" Peter continued. "At first I did not know who my people are. Are they in Ouzinkie, Kodiak, Anchorage? I came up with the answer. I wanted to help my people, and they are the Alutiiq people."

"You never know what you will become in future," Peter told youths at the conference. "Two years ago in high school I wanted to become a chef, and I will go to college for it, but I also want to learn my language and revitalize it."

Peter works for the Native Village of Afognak as an Alutiiq language mentor. He mentors students at Kodiak High School and at Kodiak Community College, where he is a full-time student, and teaches anyone who wants to learn the language.

Educational reform sought

A workshop on "Educational Reform—Our Vision for the Future of Education" continued the work AFN delegates started in 2011 to engage the State of Alaska in a new and different way with Alaska Native people. Gloria O'Neill, president and CEO of Cook Inlet Tribal Council, moderated the workshop.

Five statements developed at the workshop were presented to AFN delegates with a request to deem the statements true or false. A large majority of about 500 delegates found each of the following statements to be true. (1) Native control over school programs is critical to achieving Native students' success. (2) A culturally relevant curriculum is vital to Native student success. (3) Regional and district schools run by Alaska Native people provide one opportunity to Native student success. (4) Alaska Native students need academic rigor and high expectations wherever they are. (5) Alaska Native organizations should have control of education systems, as they have with the ANCSA corporations and health care.

AFN delegates adopted a resolution to amend the Alaska Native Education Equity Act and to use all legislative tools to ensure that funding is administered by Alaska Native organizations to improve education for Alaska Native youth and maximize leadership and involvement of Alaska Native organizations in such efforts.

Late Friday afternoon, Senator Lisa Murkowski took testimony on new culturally-relevant approaches to the education of Alaska Native children from an invited panel of educators during a two-hour field hearing of the U.S. Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee at the Dena'ina Center in Anchorage.

Other workshop topics

Other well-attended work sessions at the AFN convention were "Strong Native Peoples—In Body, Spirit and Mind," moderated by Katherine Gottlieb, Southcentral Foundation; "Energy for Our Communities," moderated by Deborah Vo, Alaska Energy Authority; and "Native Community's Relationship with the State of Alaska," moderated by Reggie Joule, retired Alaska State legislator and newly elected mayor of the Northwest Arctic Borough.

NOME VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT 2012— The NVFD currently has 42 members that protect approximately 14 square miles and about 3,500 people.

started the show as emcee introducing honored guests and reading a history of the department that was followed by personal anecdotes from firefighters.

Frank Richardson, with many years of service with the department, accompanied by wife Dolores Richardson, came from Anchorage as an honored guest. Richardson gave a fascinating account of the restoration of the 1937 Chevrolet fire engine that was abandoned, then unearthed and lovingly restored. The shiny red vehicle sat under spotlights as centerpiece of the vintage fire-fighting equipment displayed.

Before the celebration, firefighters drove the treasured fire truck to the stairs of the Rec Center and raised it with forklifts. The City of Nome's public works department had to remove the door and it's casing to ease the vehicle onto the floor. The beautifully restored vehicle drew people with irresistible magnetism to its side for photographs.

Curtis E. Jacobs attended as honored guest and described a young boy's memories of firefighters in Nome during the 1930's. Jacobs' father, Curtis Jacobs, helped to organize the early Nome Volunteer Fire Dept. that received its charter from the City in 1937.

Curtis E. Jacobs recalls the day the 1937 rig rolled off the barge at Nome.

"I remember in 1937 when my two sisters—Audrey and Winona—and I went down to the jetty to watch them unload that 1937 fire truck that is in the hall here. About a week later, the whole town turned out to Lomen's dock to watch them fire up the engine for the first time," Jacobs said. "They tried out all the hoses and equipment to make sure everything worked. The town was happy. I was seven years old."

There was a fire rig in town before the arrival of the shiny red Chevrolet. Horses powered that fire wagon. "This was the first mobilized truck in town," Jacobs said. "It was quite a deal."

The motorized fire engine was purchased for $3,700 F.O.B. Seattle and put aboard a barge operated by Alaska Steam Company. The company charged Nome a nominal fee of $50, according to a history presented at the dinner by John K. Handeland.

There was a brand new fire station built along side the North Pole Bakery that was also the City Hall, according to Jacobs.

"Mrs. McLain was the city clerk. She had her office up on the second floor. The basement was the police department. I used to go down there and play cards with W.W. Laws and his assistant," Jacobs said.

After the arrival of the 1937 Chevrolet, the town sold the horses for $9 and modified the fire station to accommodate the motorized vehicle, Handeland said.

About 16 men got together and presented a fire department constitution to the city council calling for the formation of a volunteer fire department. The council approved the resolution creating the Nome Volunteer Fire Department on Oct. 11, 1937.

"Nome Volunteer Fire Department has been staffed by hundreds of dedicated volunteers over the years who have dedicated their time and risked their lives for the safety of our community," Handeland said. "Since its inception, we have relied on the dedication of the volunteers to protect citizens from the perils of fire."

The Nome Fire Hall on Bering Street resulted from the work of department volunteers. "From the foundation, to the walls, to the roof, to the hose tower, to the concrete pavement in front, this was all accomplished as a labor of love by your local firemen. Distribution of fire protectors has been responsible for lives saved," Handeland noted.

The fire department has modernized equipment and personnel. When it was started, the charter specified the department to comprise 20 men.

However, the membership in recent years has lobbied to expand the ranks to include both genders. Penny Jack was the first woman to join; Mackenzie Oles is currently an active member.

These were times before the town had modern water and sewer services, Frank Richardson said. The fire engine had to load water from a salt-water pump.

Richardson joined the department in June 1958. One day the chief walked over to where Richardson was working and told him the department needed someone to run the water pump.

"You look like you'd be a good man," Richardson remembered him saying. "That's how I joined the department."

A salt water line ran the length of Front Street. The pipes had to be checked and emptied each fall lest they freeze up and be useless in spring.

The department hooked the hose to a stanchion in front of the old city hall and ran it many blocks to the truck to put out a fire.

By and by, the 1937 Chevrolet fire truck went out to pasture with a series of private owners, then was eventually abandoned.

However, some firemen, now retired or passed on, began to badger Richardson to help them restore the derelict vehicle.

"No, I don't think so," he told them. "That truck is in pretty rough shape."

Indeed it was.

"When it was sitting on the beach, someone had come along and used everything that would break for target practice," Richardson said.

The men kept after him to take up the project. Finally, he succumbed. The fire truck had been stored in the old Nome Public Schools district office across from the Nome Fire Hall. Getting it out of the building posed a problem, Richardson told the anniversary gathering. It hadn't moved because the brake drums had frozen to the brake shoes. The building had sunk since the fire truck went in so the doors wouldn't open. The furnace hadn't been running for five years.

Although a dozen or so men worked on the truck, Richardson wanted to credit a lot of the effort to firemen Bobby Morris, Tommy Johnson, Chuck Lewis and Bobby Lewis, "all gone on," Richardson said. "I am glad to see the old truck has become an old Nomeite. There's only one way to become an old Nomeite. That's when everybody who knows why you came here has left Nome one way or another."

Part II of this series will tell how the volunteers removed the fire truck from the building and recovered it from neglect.

As master of ceremonies, Fire Chief Matt Johnson officiated at the retirement of NVFD Capt. Warren Little, who has answered fire calls for the past four decades. Little went to the front of the gymnasium with his wife Martina, to accept a ceremonial firefighter's ax bearing the NVFD seal.

Little, retired fire chief, joined the department in 1973. He praised the department.

He was proud of his service as chief and proud of the NVFD, he said. "We can hold our own with any fire department in the country, professional or volunteer," said Little.

NVFD honored six firefighters who had retired since the last ceremony in 2010: Pat Johanson, Clifford Johnson, Charlie Painter, Mike Thomas, Stan Morgan and Jim West

Jr.

Nome's current Volunteer Fire Department has 42 members who protect approximately 14 square miles and about 3,500 people.

Firefighter Chuck Fagerstrom, unable to attend the party, sent his regards and congratulations. With the extensive training and dedication of NVFD, "we can stand tall among full-time firefighters," Fagerstrom said. He noted that volunteers join the department because they share a motivation to give back to their community in public service. Fagerstrom has served for 44 years and is the oldest firefighter in the state holding a Firefighter 2 certificate.

Gov. Sean Parnell sent his congratulations on NVFD's 75th anniversary to Chief Matt Johnson and the community of Nome. "I am grateful for the department's commitment to readiness and quick reaction in the community of Nome. Thank you for your dedication and devotion for making the state of Alaska a better and safer place to live," Parnell wrote.

Sen. Mark Begich also sent his congratulation on the NVFD milestone. "Fire departments work hard to keep our communities safe. They provide crucial community service, save lives and educate communities on fire safety and prevention. Nome's volunteer firefighters put their lives on the line day after day and are true heroes. Congratulations to the firefighters who have kept the community safe year after year," Begich said in his statement.

Next week: Part II, NVFD history.

Obituaries

Debra Annie Kimoktoak

In loving memory of our beloved mother, daughter, sister, aunt, niece and cousin Debra Annie Kimoktoak. Debra was born July 12, 1964 at the family's fish camp at Ungalik and passed away September 24, 2012 in a boating accident.

Debra graduated from Koyuk Malimut School in May of 1982. She started working at a young age as a summer youth worker. She also attended Alaska Technical Center in Kotzebue. She worked various jobs as well as being on the firefighter crew for Koyuk. She served as the Mayor for the City of Koyuk and also was a City Council member where she learned and loved serving with fellow member, Auntie Irene. She also worked at the City as Utility Clerk.

Her greatest loves and accomplishments were her six beautiful children. They were a blessing to her. Patrick and Steven also blessed her with grandchildren, Cameron, Bubba and her newest granddaughter Tasha, which were her pride and joy. She was proud of her son Earl for graduating from high school and was very excited to see him continue his education at University of SE in Juneau. Renee and Linda made her very proud to know that they were doing well in school and excelled in their activities. Debra and her son Wesley had a close bond, and would frequently have special times of prayer together. She had a gentle spirit and was a blessing to her family. She had a big smile and a tender heart, and showed special care for her children. At Christmas, she made sure to get a gift for all her nephews and nieces. She loved baking pies for family dinners on special occasions.

Debra loved being out in the country, fishing, setting the net with her sister Ommie, and gathering food. She would always store her food properly and with care. During the winter, she would enjoy inviting her family and friends over for delicious meals. She loved going out boating and riding her snowmachine.

Debra had a very strong alto voice and held a special place in the Northern Lights Choir for the Koyuk Covenant Church. She had a big heart and would help her friends and family whenever she could. She was always thankful for whoever helped her.

She had many, many friends from all over Alaska and throughout the lower 48. She enjoyed telling stories about her adventurous trips egg hunting with brother Dean or going boating with her handy lady Margaret Brown. Debra's laugh was contagious and her smile lit many rooms. She would make us laugh until we cried. She will surely be missed by all her close family and friends.

Debra is preceded in death by her father Albert Kimoktoak, Sr., sister Linda, brothers Albert Kimoktoak, Jr., and Albert Kimoktoak, Jr.

She leaves behind her six beautiful children: Patrick and Sophie, Steven and Luann, Earl, Renee, Linda, and Wesley; her beautiful grandchildren Cameron, Patrick "Bubba" and Tasha. Her mother Esther and brothers: Allen (Molly), Darrell (Viola), Arthur (Valerie), Dean, Alvin (Andrea) and sisters: Kathy, Ella (Orville), Maggie, Annette (Clement), Marilyn (Dan), Helen (Joe) and children.

"When I first brought the Gospel to you and then went on my way, leaving Macedonia, only you Philip-pians became my partners in giving and receiving. No other church did this —Philippians 4:15 TLB

Don't miss the impact of this amazing statement: Paul said, "the only church that became my partners in giving and receiving were you Philip-pians. No other church did this."

Why didn't the other churches Paul established become partners in "giving and receiving?" It's because they didn't understand the laws of God concerning sowing and reap-ing. The Corinthians were a rough, carnal lot, and Paul said more to them about giving than any other church. Because of their lack of spirituality they needed the most en-couragement to give.

But the Philip-pians were differ-ent. They knew the truths of "giving and receiving." This freed them to be liberal with their gifts. This is why they became Paul's partners: they knew when they gave, God would give back to them "pressed down, shaken together, full and run-ning over" (Luke 6:38).

You and I should be Philip-pian givers. We should truly believe that if we are faithful in our giving, God will pour out his blessings on us, and that our needs will be met. I've heard some people say that they don't want anything in return from God when they give. They just want to give because they love him. This is a great attitude but it actually can break down under the pressure of everyday living. When we have bills that are coming or past due, we sometimes think, "I want to give, but I just can't afford it."

A true Philip-pian giver knows that when they give they will also re-ceive. Actually, they will say, "I re-ally can't afford not to give." More than anything, we should want to be the kind of person of whom God says, "Of all the Christians in your city, you are the one I can count on to be my partner."

My friend, if you're running short on finances, check your heart and see whether or not you're a Corinthian Christian or a Philip-pian Christian. Maybe it's not about the finances. Maybe it's about giving God more of your time and energy in helping to reach out to the lost souls around you. I promise you, if you and I are faithful in our giving (in every area of our life), the Lord God will con-tinue to "meet all our needs, accord-ing to his glorious riches in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19).

Blessings to you, in his holy name!

Nome Public Schools Annual Child Find Notice 2012-13

All children have the ability to learn. Each one has unique strengths and weaknesses. Some learn faster. Some have different needs due to problems with seeing, hearing, talking, moving, or simply dealing with people. This notice is to inform you and the community about the right to, and availability of, educational services for all children with disabilities.

Nome Public School District is required by federal and state law (34 CFR 300.220.34 CFR 300.121) to conduct an annual 'Child Find' effort as a means to locate, identify, and evaluate every student between the ages of 3 and 21 with a suspected disability within its jurisdiction.

Disabilities that qualify for Special Education services include: autism, deafness, deaf-blindness, early childhood developmental delay, emotional disturbance, hearing impairment, specific learning disability, cognitive impairment, orthopedic impairment, speech or language impairment, traumatic brain injury, visual impairment, or any combination of these, which has or might be expected to interfere with a child's academic progress. Not all students referred for assessment qualify for special education services.

Students who are found eligible are entitled to a free and appropriate education, including specially designed instruction tailored to meet his or her unique needs.
Any information regarding a child is treated in a confidential manner as required by state and federal law.

If you suspect that your child or a child you know may need to be identified in any of the areas listed, and the child is not currently receiving Special Education services, please contact:

HONORED—Steve Ivanoff of Unalakleet and his late wife Zoe were selected for the Hunter-Fisher President’s Award at the 2012 Alaska Federation of Natives Convention held last week in Anchorage. The award recognizes Alaska Natives who exemplify and preserve the spirit of successful subsistence hunting, trapping and sharing.

AFN honors Native leaders

By Laurie McNicholas

Among winners of President’s Awards at the annual Alaska Federation of Natives convention held last week in Anchorage were the late State Senator Al Adams, selected for the Dr. Walter Soboleff “Warrior of Light” award; Steve Ivanoff of Unalakleet and his late wife, Zoe, chosen for the Hunter-Fisher Award; and Jacob Martin of Nome, recipient of the Roger Lang Youth Leadership Award. AFN President Julie Kitka presented the awards at a luncheon on Friday.

Adams was born and raised in Kotzebue and spent much of his life serving rural communities in Northwest Alaska. He was devoted to his wife Diane and their children Albert, Jr., Guy, Herbert, Michelle, Bart and Luke, and 10 grandchildren.

Adams represented the North Slope and northwest regions in the Alaska House of Representative for eight years, starting in 1980. He served in the State Senate from 1989 to 2000, representing the Bering Strait region in addition to regions to the north. He chaired the Senate Finance Committee and championed the Power Cost Equalization Program to reduce energy costs in rural Alaska.

The Dr. Walter Soboleff “Warrior of Light” award recognizes an Alaska Native individual who uplifts Alaska Native people by enriching their spirits and unifying them.

Steve Ivanoff was born to Ralph and Veronica Ivanoff in St. Michael and was raised in Unalakleet.

Zoe was born and raised in Kotzebue. She attended Covenant High School in Unalakleet, where she and Steve met. Her parents are Marie and Chuck Greene of Kotzebue.

Steve and Zoe engaged in year-round subsistence activities including caribou and moose hunting, egg gathering, crabbing, fishing and gardening. They taught their children, Kelsi, Ralph and Gage, how to properly take care of, put away and prepare food.

The couple embodies the values of respect, tradition, hard work and cooperation. Both have served on numerous regional boards and school boards in Alaska. Steve was re-elected to represent Bering Strait villages on the AFN board at last week’s convention. The Hunter-Fisher Award recognizes Alaska Natives who exemplify and preserve the spirit of successful subsistence hunting, trapping and sharing, and the Alaska Native way of life.

Jacob Martin is of Ugiuvagumiut (King Island Eskimo) and of Russian descent. His parents are Guy and Blue Martin of Nome. Jacob graduated this year from Nome-Beltz High School, where he participated in numerous academic, athletic and extracurricular activities and organizations. He is a freshman at the University of Alaska Fairbanks, majoring in geological engineering.

Jacob spent four months helping the Shared Beringian Heritage Program plan a Youth Forum prior to the 2011 Beringia Days conference in Nome. He then served as the sole youth representative at the annual meeting to recommend project proposals for the Beringia Program. His ideas and suggestions helped benefit the Beringia region in Alaska and Chukotka Russia.

Near the end of the AFN convention on Saturday, friends and family of prominent Native Alaskans who died within the past year gathered on stage to pay tribute to them.

Videos with photos of those memorialized were shown on large screens.

Among those honored were the late Senator Al Adams, Zoe Ivanoff and Charlie Johnson of Nome.

Charlie Brower described Charlie Johnson’s life of service to Alaska Natives as Johnson’s wife, Brenda, and their children, Nicole and Frank, stood by. Johnson was born in 1939 to Frank and Marcella Johnson in White Mountain. He spent much of his life ensuring that other Alaska Natives could continue to engage in their customary and traditional hunting, fishing and gathering way of life.

Johnson served as president of Kawerak, Inc. from 1976-1983.

In 1979 he was elected to the board of the Bering Straits Native Corp., served as its president from 1983-1988 and remained on the board through 2006.

He chaired the AFN board of directors from 1981-1983.

In 1994 Johnson led the fight on behalf of the Native community to preserve the Native exemption in the Marine Mammal Protection Act and to include Section 119, which provides for a co-management role for Alaska Native organizations in the subsistence harvest of marine mammals.

Johnson was instrumental in organizing the Eskimo Walrus Commission in 1978, the Indigenous Peoples Council for Marine Mammals in the early 1990s and the Nanuuq Commission in 1994.

He served as executive director of the Eskimo Walrus Commission and, most recently, the Nanuuq Commission representing Alaska Native villages in the Arctic on matters pertaining to polar bears.
