Erickson to continue service as NVAD chief

By Sandra L. Medearis
Vicki Erickson will continue to lead the dedicated volunteers who interrupt sleep or daytime activities to help people under duress of medical issues.
The Nome Common Council voted unanimously May 13 to approve a memorandum of understanding with Erickson to continue her service as ambulance chief.
Erickson will soon complete 20 years of service with Nome Volunteer Ambulance Department.
City Manager Josie Bahnke commended Erickson's dedication to the first response service, noting that Erickson has been instrumental in recruiting volunteers, training them, and has been an ambassador for the City of Nome.

Erickson took an active part in overseeing the selection and procurement of the NVAD's new ambulance, Bahnke added.
According to City law, the manager appoints the ambulance chief upon recommendation of the NVAD. The appointment is subject to confirmation by the Council.
The City entered into an MOU for ambulance chief services with Erickson on May 11, 2009 for a two-year term and on May 11, 2011 for an additional two years.
Erickson will receive a stipend of AuruMar plans more environmental studies

By Diana Haecker
Although the sea ice still holds fast and cold temperatures make this Nome spring feel like winter, offshore gold miners are already trickling into town and gearing up for the upcoming summer season.
One of the bigger mining companies that leased large tracts during the Dept. of Natural Resources' offshore lease sale in 2011 is a South African joint venture.
The third-largest gold producing company in the world, AngloGold Ashanti, and the world's leading diamond producer and pioneer of undersea mining, DeBeers teamed up to form a company called AuruMar Ltd and bid successfully on large offshore tracts.
According to their recently published 2012 Environmental Baseline study report, a company called Placer Marine Mining Inc., PMM for short, was formed to operate the "Nome offshore project" mining leases.

AuruMar Ltd. is the exclusive technical services company working for PMM and began environmental and other studies to determine the extend of gold resources hiding in the seafloor.
This summer, AuruMar plans to continue their data gathering and to compile more environmental baseline information.
Their stated goal is to develop the leases "into an economic mining operation over the next four years," the study says.
According to Gary van Eck, the Lew's tall(but true)tales of old Nome gold miners

By Lew Tobin

Old gold miners were tough and always in a hurry. They say Jimmy Kelliher always walked like he was going into the wind. Hunched over, head down, arms swinging and making time. He never talked much while walking. If he had something to say he stopped and told you. Even in a blizzard, he stopped to talk.

Jimmy walked from Taylor to Nome about once a week when he ran the roadhouse up there. Taylor would be about 120 miles from Nome. If the road still worked the walk was a little straighter and quicker, but he went all year round. It was said that in one of these trips, he broke through the ice about three miles from his home camp. It was about 20 below zero. Jimmy climbed out of his clothes, beyond his underwear, and ran naked in his boots to the cabin. He made it without freezing anything.

His brother, Billy Hogendorn was a miner up in that area. Billy got his Cat stuck in a swamp once and needed a second Cat to pull him out. He knew there was a second Cat on the next mining claim about a mile away but the miner for that claim was in Nome at the time. They were good friends but Billy didn't operate that way. He walked all the way into Nome and asked the guy if he could borrow the machine before walking back to pick it up and free his own cat.

Other gold miners walked just as much and just as hard. Mr. Wienheart used to walk from Deering to White Mountain regularly. It would take him 24 hours straight walking (no sleeping, no eating). Winter or summer, he said it didn't make that much difference except when crossing the lakes and streams.

Old man Munz (Bill Munz, the founder of Munz airline), used to go mining every year just beyond Death Valley (between Deering and Buckland). To get all his equipment up there, he'd drive his Cat about a day's journey up the trail from Nome. Then, leaving the Cat running so that it wouldn't freeze up, he'd walk back to town and fire up his airplane. He'd fly the airplane up to the Cat and then tie it down to dead men (just a colorful figure of speech) he buried in the ice. He'd jump in the Cat and drive up the trail another day. Then he'd leave the Cat running and walk back to the airplane start it up and fly it to the Cat once again. It usually took him a little over a week to get both those pieces up to his mine.

A Look at the Past

Editorial

So What's the Plan?

How do we want downtown Nome to look? Do we want it to thrive and be the heart of our town? Do we want it fade away into a bunch of empty buildings and vacant lots? Do we want folks to enjoy being on Front Street? Are we still set on building the new museum and library on the old Gold Company lots at the north end of Steadman? Since the lots are near the Rec Center, wouldn't it make sense to put a sports center there with tennis, track, skating, softball and hockey fields?

What will happen to the building the library and museum currently occupy? Can we put a few benches and picnic tables downtown? How about some flowers? Can we discourage drunks from pestering visitors and children? Can we build some smaller hotels, apartment buildings, offices and stores on the smaller empty lots downtown? What will go into the old hospital? It's sturdy and out of the flood plain. Could it be a cultural center/museum? Could it be an alcohol rehab center / homeless shelter? Could it be an assisted living center? It has a lot of potential once it overcomes community inertia.

Nome has been sitting on state-allocated museum funds for a few years. As the City dithers, the cost of labor and materials increases. When we finally get the structure finished, it will likely have shrunk from its original intended size and be too small. —N.L.M—

White House releases national strategy for Arctic

On May 10, the Obama Administration released a 13-page document outlining a National strategy for the Arctic region. The priorities include increasing defense and other national security activities in the region, as well as building up the infrastructure to support them; working to safeguard the region’s environment; and working with other Arctic nations one-on-one and through multi-country organizations, such as the Arctic Council, to manage activities in the region in ways that reduce the potential for conflict. In addition, the strategy calls for a push for ratification of the UN’s Law of the Sea Treaty, which failed to clear the Senate last year.

President Obama said in an accompanying statement that the Administration solicited input from Alaska Natives, the State of Alaska and others as it was developing the National Strategy for the Arctic. “Successful implementation of the high-level lines of effort identified in the National Strategy will depend upon active engagement with Alaska Natives, the State of Alaska and other key stakeholders,” the statement reads.

“In particular, proceeding with the stewardship of Arctic resources under an Integrated Arctic Management approach requires, by its terms, meaningful, up-front input by the State, Alaska Natives, and others,” says the statement.

Administration officials will be hosting roundtable discussions in Alaska in the coming weeks to discuss how best to move forward with the implementation of the concepts laid out in this National Strategy. The initial meetings will include high-level administration officials from the White House and from key agencies.

The meetings will be held in mid-June, at a time and location yet to be announced.

Secretary Kerry to attend the Arctic Council meeting

Secretary of State John Kerry traveled to Stockholm, Sweden on May 14, to meet with Swedish Prime Minister Reinfeldt and Foreign Minister Bildt to discuss the Arctic Council, Syria, Iran, Afghanistan and other issues of global importance.

Secretary Kerry will then travel to Kiruna, Sweden, where he will attend the Arctic Council’s Ministerial Meeting on May 15.

The Arctic Council is the only diplomatic forum focused solely on the entire Arctic region. The Council addresses the challenges of climate and environmental change, biodiversity and oceans, among other issues. Secretary Kerry will join the Foreign Ministers of the seven other Arctic states, as well as the representative of the Arctic indigenous peoples, to review the accomplishments of the Arctic Council and to approve the Council’s work plan for the next two years.

Ministers are slated to sign the Arctic Marine Oil Pollution Preparedness and Response Agreement, the second legally binding agreement among the Arctic States, after the 2011 Arctic Search and Rescue Agreement.

The hope is that the agreement would forge strong partnerships in advance of an oil spill so that Arctic countries can quickly and cooperatively respond before it endangers lives and threatens fragile ecosystems.

U.S. Senator Mark Begich urged Kerry to consider the appointment of a U.S. Arctic ambassador and to build on the momentum of recent international negotiations regarding commercial fishing in Arctic waters. Begich also reminded Kerry of the urgency of appointing a U.S. Ambassador to the Arctic to represent U.S. interests as the region. Six of eight Arctic nations, including Russia, Norway and Finland, have named Ambassador-level diplomats to represent their interests before the Arctic Council.

Coast Guard to hold hearing for Kulluk grounding

A Coast Guard formal marine casualty investigation hearing is scheduled for May 20 at noon, in the Loussac Library, Assembly Hall Chambers, to investigate the contributing causes that led to the conical drilling unit Kulluk grounding on Sitkalidak Island Dec. 31, 2012.

The Coast Guard conducts investigations following marine casualties to determine the causal and contributing factors that lead to such incidents.

The investigative hearings are part of the investigative process.

They provide a forum for the investigating officer to collect information from government and industry professionals about the incident.

Rear Adm. Thomas Ostebo, commander, Coast Guard 17th District, ordered the formal marine casualty investigation to examine the facts, circumstances and causal factors involved in the Kulluk grounding.

Cmdr. Joshua McTaggart from the Coast Guard Investigations National Center of Expertise is conducting the investigation with the assistance of technical advisors from Coast Guard Sector Anchorage and the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement.

Representatives from the National Transportation Safety Board are also participating in the investigation.

Witnesses from the Coast Guard, Shell, Nobel and other organizations will be called to testify about the facts and circumstance surrounding the grounding of the Kulluk.

Once the investigation is completed, the investigating officer will submit a written report of investigation, which will include findings of facts, conclusions and recommendations.

Ostebo will use the findings and recommendations within the report to determine whether additional measures are required to prevent such marine casualties and what, if any, actions need to be taken to promote safety of life and property at sea.

BSEE and Coast Guard cooperate to improve offshore oversight

The Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement Director James Watson and U.S. Coast Guard Rear Admiral Joseph Servidio announced last week at the Offshore Technology Conference in Houston, Texas a new Memorandum of Agreement.

It is designed to strengthen the working relationship between the two agencies on the management of safety and environmental protection responsibilities on the Outer Continental Shelf.

Under the current regulatory regime, both the U.S. Coast Guard and BSEE have shared responsibilities for the regulation of safety management systems on the OCS.

This MOA aims to ensure a joint approach to safety and environmental management.

Together, BSEE and the Coast Guard will use this agreement to establish a process for the identification of offshore safety and environmental management requirements within the jurisdiction of both agencies and to spur the development of joint policies and guidance.

The agreement also provides a mechanism to ensure that all future regulations, policies and guidance are enforced consistently by both agencies.

$500 per month through May 12, 2015.

The City and Erickson may extend the agreement by negotiation past May 2015.

The Council passed two resolutions accepting loans to fund improvements to the community's drinking water and sewer systems. In the first action, the City will accept a loan of almost $2 million from the DEC Alaska Drinking Water Fund for East Nome water replacement work. Up to half the loan amount was eligible for repayment conversion to a grant, John H. Handeland, utility manager, said. The loan has a payback term of 20 years at 1.5 percent interest.

In response to an application from Nome Joint Utility Systems, the City will accept from the state another chunk of change—$1,950,000—from the ADEC Clean Water Fund for improvements to Nome's sewer system on the east end. Up to $180,000 is eligible for subsidy. This loan also has a payback of 20 years at 1.5 percent interest.

In other action, the Council approved a slew of waivers—meaning no charge—to organizations using city facilities:

- Nome Relay for Life for cancer fund raising activities, Nome Recreation Center, $1,900 in user fees waived.

- Nome Community Center for "Nome Can Cook" food fundraiser for Boys and Girls Club at Old St. Joe's, $200 waived.

- Kawerak, Inc. for a Lemonade Day after celebration at Mini Convention Center, no waived fee amount specified.

- Northwest Campus for an event to celebrate school year's end for Nome youth at Mini Convention Center, no fee specified.

The Council introduced and passed to second reading two money ordinances. One authorizes buying property from Bering Straits Native Corp, Commerce Bench, 13.30 acres at the north end of Steadman Street, for $320,000. The price includes a three-year option on a 75-foot wide strip to accommodate an extension of Steadman northward to Greg Kruschek Avenue. After more than a year of discussion among the Council members and members of the Nome Museum and Library Commission on various sites, the City may use this property for the Richard Foster Building to house a new museum, library and regional culture display.

The museum commission was scheduled to meet May 15.

Bahnke's report noted that Gov. Sean Parnell had re-appointed Laura Samuelson, museum director, to the State Historical Records Board.

The Council shelved a request from Nome Emergency Shelter Team for $20,000 to support the homeless shelter pending more information.

The shelter was open for 161 nights during the cold season, serving meals and providing 2,494 bed nights over the winter.

Finally, the Council introduced and voted into second reading the 2013 operations and maintenance spending plan for Nome Joint Utility System.

The budget comprises estimated revenues of $14,276,079 and O & M expenses of 13,738,103, including depreciation in the amount of $4,799,700 that yields a net cash margin of $537,975.

The margin plus non-cash amortizations and prior years' reserves would fund the capital improvement budget, annual bond and debt service principal payments, fuel inventory and grant program local participation that are not included in the O & M budget, Handeland said.

The budget allows $699,000 for total administration salaries and payroll costs, covering manager ($189,000), accounting labor ($235,000), finance officer ($155,000) and administrative assistants ($120,000).

U.S. Senators Mark Begich and Lisa Murkowski introduced an amendment designed to spur development of a deep water port in the Arctic by giving the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers authority to engage in expanded partnerships with local, tribal and borough governments.

The amendment, offered to the Water Resources Development Act of 2013, is expected to pass the Senate this week. It would allow the Corps to partner with state or local governments to plan, design, construct or maintain deep-water ports in the Arctic region.

Begich introduced a similar bill in February, the Arctic Deep Water Ports Enhancement Act, which also encouraged private sector development. The Arctic Deep Water Ports Enhancement Act included the public private partnership language as well as provisions to streamline environmental review and provide federally backed loans to encourage private development.

River Watch team monitors river break up

As of last week, the State Emergency Operations Center stands ready to monitor potential flooding during the spring river break-up season.

The SEOC preparedness level is at a heightened sense of awareness. Each spring the River Watch program, a partnership between Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Management and the National Weather Service Alaska-Pacific River Forecast Center, conducts aerial observations of ice jam prone rivers, provides flood warnings and alerts, and assists communities with emergency management and evacuations.

River Watch Teams employ one APRFC Hydrologist, one DHS&EM Emergency Manager, and one local pilot.

A River Watch team has already traveled to Eagle where they will begin monitoring ice conditions on the Upper Yukon.

"Spring has come late to Alaska this year, low temperatures and late snow has delayed break-up. If we see a swing from below normal temperatures to high temperatures severe flooding is a possibility," said Bryan Fisher, Incident Commander. "With the River Watch teams in place and the SEOC activated we can quickly make assessments, determine the threat, and set in motion the necessary emergency response assets."

"In 2009, a rapid warming brought severe flooding along the Yukon and Kuskokwim rivers," said Fisher. "Time will tell whether we have nuisance flooding or another severe year. If it is the latter, we are ready to move."

Congressional working group to examine Endangered Species Act

The U.S. House Committee on Natural Resources has formed a working group to examine the Endangered Species Act. Rep. Doc Hastings, R-Wash., chair of the committee, and Rep. Cynthia Lummis, R-Wyo., co-chair of the Western Caucus, will lead the working group, according to a press release. The group will sponsor forums and hearings in the coming year, seeking input on ways the law can be updated and ways it is working well. The act was last reauthorized in 1988. The Endangered Species Act was created four decades ago in 1973 to preserve, protect and recover key domestic species. Since that time, over 1,400 U.S. domestic species and sub-species have been listed. Most species remain on the list and hundreds more could potentially be added within the next two years.

According to the press release, the Endangered Species Act Working Group is comprised of members from across the country who will analyze the ESA from all angles. One of the goals of the ESA Working Group is to start an open discussion and hear from everyone who has thoughts, ideas, and opinions.

Orphaned polar bear cub flies UPS to the Buffalo Zoo

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced that Kali, the polar bear cub rescued in March from the Point Lay area, will leave the Alaska Zoo on May 14, arriving at New York's Buffalo Zoo on May 15. Kali, a 65-pound cub, will join young female cub Luna.

On March 12, USF&W received word that a female polar bear had been shot near Point Lay, Alaska.

The adult female was accompanied by a cub, which was transferred first to the community of Point Lay, and then to the North Slope Borough's Department of Wildlife Management in Barrow.

After the cub was examined and observed to be in good condition, USF&W asked the Alaska Zoo to temporarily care for it.

Dubbed "Operation Kali," Kali's trip from Anchorage to Buffalo has been arranged and funded by M&T Bank, one of the Buffalo Zoo's longstanding corporate sponsors.

Kali will be accompanied by Alaska Zoo Executive Director Patrick Lampi and Zoo Curator Shannon Jensen along with Dr. Kurt Volle, a veterinarian with the Buffalo Zoo.

Kali and crew will take off from Anchorage for Buffalo, New York, on a UPS 747-400 jet on May 14 at 3:09 pm.

It will arrive in Buffalo on May 15 at 5:16 am after a short layover and plane change at Worldport, UPS's international air hub in Louisville, Kentucky.

Dr. Donna Fernandes, president of the Buffalo Zoo, will greet the Alaskan contingent upon arrival in Buffalo.

The cubs will be exhibited together at the zoo.

ICE MINERS— With the sea ice still in place, ice miners continue to mine their offshore claims in front of Fort Davis with Cape Nome looming in the background.

South African-based General Manager of AuruMar, they have compiled sample data for approximately 20 percent of the PMM lease area. “The objective of this year’s program is to take surface samples to obtain an indication of mineralization, and secondly, by analyzing the surface sediments, use this to verify the interpretation of the surface geophysics that we took last year,” Van Eck wrote in an email exchange with The Nome Nugget.

The company, Van Eck said, plans to conduct more environmental baseline studies this summer in Nome. These studies include oceanographic measurements and additional diver transects. They also plan a 40-day campaign with a research boat to conduct orientation sampling and ground truthing. “This will commence around the second week of July,” Van Eck wrote.

While still in the stages of gathering data, PMM has not presented a mining plan or decided on the mining method.

“The mining design and concept will be finalized as the geological model and mine resources are identified,” the report reads. Currently, the company plans to develop the mine with a ten-year life span and an annually mined area of up to 445 acres.

A first evaluation of mining methods resulted in narrowing down three possibilities: using a subsea crawler, a cutter suction dredge and a backhoe dredger. The crawler is a subsea tracked vehicle that would be launched and recovered from a surface platform. According to the document, the crawler would use a suction nozzle deployed from a boom and would utilize a cutter or bucket wheel. “The boom would sweep the nozzle in front of the crawler to create an approximate 50 ft. wide swath while removing approximately 1.6 ft. to 3.2 ft. of seabed material along the track,” the document reads.

The cutter suction dredge would have a cutter head to loosen the seabed and transport it back to the suction mouth. “The dredged ore is then sucked up by a centrifugal pump and discharged through a pipeline to the floating process plant,” the document reads. The approximate cutting depth would be 3.2 ft. to 6.5 ft.

The document suggests that a backhoe dredge would be suited for work in environmentally sensitive areas as it grabs the sediment and hauls it out of the water without clouding the water with sediment. “The excavated sediment in the bucket is either offloaded into a barge that is moored alongside or directly fed into a process plant installed on the dredging pontoon. The cutting depth is accurately controlled to within 1.6 ft,” the document says.

The baseline study documents are available for public review at the Nome Kegoayah Kozga Library. City of Nome officials, the Harbor Master, the Chamber of Commerce and Native Corporations were kept in the loop, Van Eck said.

“We would be glad to meet with individuals, groups, and if there is enough interest, to hold a public meeting,” Van Eck added.

BUBBLES (top)— Gwendalyn Trigg-Komakhuk rode the flatbed truck which led the Walk for Life procession that kicked off National Prevention week in Nome on Saturday, May 11.

CELEBRATION (right)— Nearly 50 Nomeites turned out to participate in the Walk for Life, carrying colorful balloons and paper flowers to celebrate the good things in this life.

Nome’s organizations “pull together” for community well being

By Diana Haecker

Several organizations in Nome are busy putting on events throughout this week to inspire wellness and healthy lifestyles.

This is part of National Prevention Week, put on by the National Prevention, Health Promotion and Public Health Council.

The federal Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration is behind the events .

A stated goal is to create public awareness of substance abuse and mental health issues.

Last year, Nome celebrated its first National Prevention Week on a smaller scale when the Nome Youth Facility organized an art show, exhibiting art from NYF residents at Old St. Joe’s Hall.

Stephanie Johnson with the NYF organized the event last year.

This year, she brought in more partners to spread the message of wellness.

Those community partners are Kawerak’s Wellness Department, Norton Sound Health Corporation’s Behavioral Health, CAMP’s Healthy Start and Injury Prevention departments and the Nome Community Center.

The week kicked off last Saturday with a “Walk for Life”.

Bridie Trainor with the Kawerak Wellness department said that the walk originated to support people affected by suicide.

“It is now a celebration for wellness,” Trainor said.

At least 50 people, carrying balloons and colorful paper flowers made by Nome Youth Facility and Seaside residents, joined the “Walk of Life” parade, starting at Old St. Joe’s Hall, down Bering Street to the end of West Front Street and back.

The Nome Community Center’s Tobacco Prevention program hosts a “cold turkey day,” trading tobacco products for a turkey sandwich on Tuesday.

Norton Sound’s Healthy Start program, a new division under the CAMP department, is holding sessions the prevention of sexually transmitted diseases and HIV.

The Healthy Start program aims to help young mothers and their babies to get a healthy start in life, Kelly Keyes Zweifel, CAMP director said. The program also addresses Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders, tobacco use and domestic violence, Keyes Zweifel said.

The CAMP department will host a walk/run on Thursday.

On Friday, the NYF teamed up with Norton Sound’s Behavioral Health Department to hold a hot dog roast.

The Injury Prevention office will close out Ntl. Prevention Week with a Safety Fair and Bike rodeo on Saturday at the Nome Elementary School.

City Council, Nome School Board discuss next year's budget

By Kristine McRae

The Nome Board of Education and the Nome City Council met in a joint work session last Tuesday to review the district's funding request to the City of Nome.

Superintendent Steve Gast presented members of the City Council with the district's General Fund Budget, which outlines appropriated and requested funds from the City.

Each year the City of Nome contributes an average of $1 million to the school district.

The amount is determined by a required mill rate, which is set by the state.

In addition, the city has historical added an average of nearly $700,000 each year for special projects and equipment costs.

Last year, the additional City funds were used to purchase iPad tablets and curriculum development as well as replacement of the boiler and $150,000 for a new gym floor at Nome-Beltz High School.

In this year's request for funds, Gast said, the school district is coming in about $13,000 over last year, excluding the $150,000 that was allotted for the gym floor. He outlined additional expenditures over the coming year, including the cost of increased bandwidth to support the technology at both schools and funds for student travel.

"Also this year," Gast explained, "We're going into our reserves because we opted not to cut programs, so we're going $249,000 into our reserves to maintain a full-time special ed teacher and a certified teacher at the preschool."

The district is looking at $50,000 of new supplies to support the new common core standards, and committed $52,000 to the JROTC program.

Council member Randy Pomeranz asked whether the district had built in any costs for the teacher contract negotiations, which hadn't yet been resolved.

Gast pointed to a 2 percent increase, which should cover movement in salaries.

Councilman Tom Sparks asked whether the huge increase in technology due to increased bandwidth would be a recurring cost. Gast affirmed the rising costs but added that the state Erate program would reimburse the district 80 percent of that money spent.

Gast also fielded questions from Mayor Denise Michaels about the school's AYP status as well as the necessity of a full-time special education teacher from Sparks, to which he answered, "We are directing our money where it needs to go to meet the needs of our kids. We may need to make some hard decisions down the road, but we'll keep it [the intense focus on reading in younger grades and the special ed position] for now."

Pastor and NCC director to leave Nome

By Diana Haecker

Two active members of the community will be heading out of Nome in June and will leave positions that need to be filled. Community United Methodist Church pastor Julie Yoder Elmore and her husband David Elmore, executive director of the Nome Community Center, are leaving Nome after six years.

Julie Yoder lived in Nome in 2001, serving the community as a young adult Methodist church volunteer, working at the Food Bank, the Boys and Girls Club and the XYZ. She went back to school and attended Saint Paul School of Theology in Kansas City, where she met her future husband David Elmore. Right out of seminary, they came back to Nome in 2005. They both served at first as co-pastors at the United Methodist Church. David Elmore then took over the executive director position at NCC.

Asked what they will take away from their "Nome experience" both agree that there is a strong sense of family in this community. "It seems that everybody pulls together when there are strained relationships," Julie Elmore said.

For David Elmore, the regional subsistence culture left a lasting impression. "I gained a spiritual understanding of how the world works in terms of relationships between humans but also between humans and plants, the animals and nature," Elmore said. He said he learned many lessons regarding the sin of wasting resources about living by how much we need and not how much we want, and about how that contrasts with the mainstream consumption mentality of most Americans.

David Elmore said what most impressed him is that Nomeites know that they depend on one another because the community is so isolated from the rest of the world. He added, "Nome, they will give people second, third and fourth chances," he said. "They don't give up on people. There is always a chance of redemption."

Julie Elmore hopes that the church will continue to be an inclusive place for all. "I'd like the community to continue to see the church open for all people, where all are accepted," she said. In particular, she hopes that a program called Faith Followers continues. The program brings together kids from kindergarten age to sixth grade on Wednesday night for a meal and some Bible study. "We are the church for kids who don't have a church", Elmore stated. She said that 20 to 25 children attend. "We serve dinner and then have a lesson based on a Bible story or a concept".

The next pastor of the Community United Methodist Church will be Charley D. Brower, who is originally from Barrow. He will arrive in Nome around July 20.

The Nome Community Center is recruiting for an executive director to replace David Elmore. NCC administers programs such as the Boys and Girls Club, a tobacco prevention program, the Food Bank, the XYZ Senior Center and the Children's Home, a temporary foster care facility.

The Elmore's decided to move back to Michigan to be closer to family as they try to start their own family. Both will be pastors at churches within a 30-mile radius. "I'm excited to get back to pastoring churches, but I'm sad to leave the people here. This is a very special place in a lot of ways," David Elmore said.

Julie Elmore will hold her last church service on June 16. The couple is slated to leave June 17 for Michigan.

NWC celebrates 37th commencement ceremony

By Diana Haecker

University of Alaska and Northwest Campus dignitaries conferred one masters degree, one graduate certificate, two bachelor degrees, four associate degrees, three health aide certificates and 25 general education diplomas on a host of successful students during last Thursday's commencement ceremony held at Old St. Joe's Hall.

The commencement ceremony began to the sounds of "Pomp and Circumstance" as the black robed students walked in. NWC director Bob Metcalf led the ceremony that featured speeches from NWC advisory council member Dawn Salesky, UAF's Associate Vice Chancellor for Rural, Community and Native Education Pete Pinney, Kawerak Vice President Mary David, GED program director Ron Huffman and Norton Sound Health Corporation Health Aide Trainer Dawyn Sawyer. Also present were faculty members Joe Mason and Claudia Ihl.

The upbeat tone of the celebration reflected the academic achievements won by hard work, unwavering tenacity and strong will power.

All students graduating with higher degrees were women. Most had to balance raising a family and working with their course work. During their speeches, it became apparent they were inspired by their families and children to lead as role models and to finish their education, no matter how long it would take.

A Shishmaref family had double reasons to celebrate as their daughters Mary Huntington and Stacey Paniptchuk graduated. Huntington is the assistant principal at the Shishmaref School. She graduated with a Master of Education, educational leadership. Paniptchuk, a teacher in Shaktoolik, graduated with a certificate in Elementary Education.

Lolene Buck graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology.

She thanked Josie Garnie who inspired her to get into the program and further her education.

Lisa Elanna-Strickling excitedly pumped her Bachelor of Arts degree in Rural Development in the air. She said, with her family's and her husband's help, she was able to fulfill one of her life's goals.

The first three Nome-trained nurses graduated with Associate of Applied Science degrees. They are Jessica Mute, Amber Ryan and Sarah Weaver. Weaver graduated cum laude.

Dawyn Sawyer, Health Aide trainer with NSHC, introduced the recipients of Community Health Aide certificates. Sawyer acknowledged the 41-year-old program that trains health aides for work in the villages without a doctor and praised the tenacity of those graduates. "It's hard to finish this course because life sometimes intervenes," Sawyer said.

The recipients of Health Aide certificates are Kristen Amaktoolik, Gwendolyn Nayokpuk and Sara Seetot.

Also present were 11 of the 25 General Education Diploma recipients. The following graduated with their GED: Jennifer Adsuna (Nome), Stephan Apangalook (Gambell), Naomi Booshu (Gambell), Beau Brown (White Mountain), Edrick Campbell (Gambell), Sophia Dixon (Nome), Pearl Goodhope (Brevig Mission), Christopher Ivanoff

Do you have barometric bones? The effects of weather on joint pain

By Bob Lawrence, MD
Alaska Family Doctor

Do your joints ache a little more when the weather changes? People with arthritis or other pain syndromes often note a worsening of pain during changes in the weather. Some people even claim to have “barometric bones,” the ability to predict approaching weather by a worsening of joint pain and stiffness.

Is there any scientific evidence to support this common phenomenon? There is plenty of anecdotal evidence. As early as 400 B.C., ancient Greek and Roman doctors noted that many illnesses were related to changes in the seasons. This led to common phrases like “feeling under the weather.”

By 1930, the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) reported that there was strong evidence that warm weather was beneficial while low barometric pressure was detrimental to patients with arthritis.

In more recent years, doctors have recognized the effects of weather changes, but they have had a hard time experimentally testing these effects because it is next to impossible to replicate a weather system in the laboratory. In 1961, an arthritis specialist out of the University of Pennsylvania named Joseph Hollander tried. Dr. Hollander designed a pressure chamber in which he could manipulate the barometric pressure and humidity in an attempt to test how these weather factors affect a person with arthritis. His study found that arthritis patients reported more pain with both increased humidity and a falling barometric pressure only when these factors occur simultaneously.

Since then, many studies have found that patients with osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis, and fibromyalgia experience increased pain with weather changes. Temperature, barometric pressure, humidity, and precipitation all prove to have some effect on the perception of painful or stiff joints.

However, the type of weather that causes the exacerbation of pain is not the same for every patient. One person finds that wet, rainy weather associated with low barometric pressure makes his or her joints ache while another person hurts worse when the weather becomes hot and dry under the influence of a high pressure system. One person finds cold arctic air is soothing. Others find it intolerable. Changes in weather, not a specific type of weather, seem to be the consistent trigger for most people with arthritis.

People with barometric bones vary widely in the ability to predict the weather. Research shows that people with back pain have the greatest sensitivity to weather changes followed by people with pain the in arms and wrists. Weather has the weakest effect on people with fibromyalgia or temporomandibular joint (TMJ) pain.

While it may not be scientifically possible to use arthritis pain to predict the weather, some meteorologists use the weather to make the reverse, and likely more helpful prediction regarding the risk of having a

HOROSCOPES

May 15, 2013 — May 21, 2013

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 19

Budget cuts do not have to be painful, Capricorn. Get your thinking cap on and look for some creative compromises. A friend's suggestion is not as crazy as it seems.

ARIES
March 21–April 19

Not a chance, Aries. Sure, there have been many twists and turns, but now is not the time to give up. The end is within sight. A deadline is extended.

CANCER
June 22–July 22

Take the leap, Cancer. There is absolutely nothing standing in your way. A change in policy at work calls for a new outlook and a new wardrobe.

LIBRA
September 23–October 22

Come on, Libra. You know what needs to be done. Stop dawdling and get a move on. Crass comments at the office lead to debate. Steer clear of the chaos.

AQUARIUS
January 20–February 18

Relax, Aquarius. You are not to blame for the poor results. What you did was up to par, and everyone knows it. Romantic gestures set the stage for a great weekend.

TAURUS
April 20–May 20

Momentous markdowms! Money to burn! Why shouldn't you go shopping, Taurus? Because you have someone more important to focus on.

LEO
July 23–August 22

Watch it, Leo. Veer off course in any way, and recovery could be long and difficult. A phone message clues you in to the root of a young one's problems.

SCORPIO
October 23–November 21

Hmm, Scorpio. If the offer sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Coworkers make light of a new set of rules. Don't follow suit. An email piques your curiosity.

PISCES
February 19–March 20

People hang on your every word this week. Use it to your advantage, Pisces. A friend makes the find of a lifetime. Celebrate with a night on the town.

GEMINI
May 21–June 21

Grovel, Gemini. No, it's not fun, but if you want to add to your collection, it's what you are going to have to do. A financial mistake is rectified in your favor.

VIRGO
August 23–September 22

Uh-uh-uh, Virgo. There's no time for deliberation. Wing it, and what happens next will surprise you. The tension lifts at home with a few words of wisdom.

SAGITTARIUS
November 22–December 21

What goes around comes around. Remember that, Sagittarius, at an upcoming event. A young one's expectations are low, too low in fact. Do your best to change that.

Saying it Sincerely

Rev. Karen Sonray of Our Savior Lutheran Church Member Nome Ministerial Association

I am reminded of your sincere faith, a faith that lived first in your grandmother Lois and your mother Eunice and now, I am sure, lives in you. For this reason, I remind you to rekindle the gift of God that is within you ...for God did not give us a spirit of cowardice, but rather a spirit of power and of love and self-discipline. 2nd Timothy 1: 5-7

Recently we celebrated Mother’s Day, which was started officially in the United States in 1914 with a proclamation by President Woodrow Wilson. From a Christian perspective, Mother’s Day is a day to give thanks to God for those who have mothered us in the faith. We recognize that motherhood is not limited to biological but motherhood includes also those caregivers who have nurtured and inspired us in our own faith formation.

Many of us have been surrounded by strong mothers. These mothers include not only our biological mothers but also our “other-mothers” who have transmitted wisdom and faith in our life. At the recent NW Campus graduation, I was struck with how many of the graduates gave thanks to their mothers who had inspired them to continue their education even when things got tough.

In the Scripture above, Paul is seeking to encourage Timothy, an early Christian leader, who is apparently facing opposition by those who “despise his youth.” Paul encourages him to look back in order to look forward. He reminds him of those who have gone before him – his grandmother Lois and his mother Eunice.

Paul is reminding us that we cannot go forward without first going back to our past to understand who we are. By calling forth the memory of Timothy’s mother and grandmother, he also instructs Timothy to recall their strong faith. Paul affirms that Timothy, though young, has what it takes to meet the challenges of the present call. He can draw on the same faith that belonged to his mother and grandmother to rekindle the gift of God that is with him. Put another way, the memory of Eunice and Lois is the wind beneath Timothy’s wings.

Memory can be a rallying cry for all of us. We do not come this far by ourselves. Lois and Eunice represent generations before all of us whose faith in the Lord propelled them to pray and work while facing great hostility. Because of their faithfulness we are where we are. We may not be where we need to be; yet we are certainly not where we used to be. For this reason we say, “Thank you Lord!”

Amid the challenges we face today, we are inspired to work toward a better life and community with the same sort of vigor as those who have gone before us.

pass a challenging pre-test and compete a rigorous two month course in order to earn the MGTI Navy Enlisted Classification (NEC).

MGTI's function as the Naval Sea Systems Command Technical Representatives and all of their technical decisions and recommendations are made in concert with and fully supported by their appropriate Regional Maintenance Center.

There are certain requirements one must meet to go through the MGTI program, one of which is ranking as an E-7 or above.

McGuire thinks it is interesting that she is the first female to gain this title.

"It doesn't surprise me that I am the first in the Gas Turbine world. You don't see that many female GSMC's or GSEC's, there are only a handful combined Navy wide," she said. "When I entered the Navy in 2000, I was told that the Gas Turbine Systems Technician rate did not have many women in it, even though it has been a rate since 1978. I figured it would be good to go into considering it was something I was already interested in."

Regardless of the rate or career chosen, McGuire advises other women to work hard to advance in their careers.

"The reality is you make your career. Fight for what you believe in and what you know is right, and do what you need to do , to get where you want to be. "

McGuire is a graduate of Nome-Beltz High School.

The Bering Straights now in book form

"The more people identify with Nome and the Bering Strait region, the more supportive they have been of this book," said Philip Dunne, former editor of Nome's second longest running newspaper, "The Bering Straights", which was published here from 1976 to 1982. "The reception has been very gratifying."

Author Dunne has compiled the more significant and interesting stories from that newspaper and is now raising funds to print it. "I expect the book to be in hand by July 1 of this year," he says. People who place an order now will get their name included in an appreciation list of early purchasers. Businesses are advertizing in it as well.

The book gives a good feel for this region during those seven years of publication. It also includes 55 pages of a special 18-week series published, "Native Life: as portrayed on the pages of a newspaper, 1900 to 1975," which is a report based on Nome Nugget articles from those years. Dunne will be in Nome until May 23. He hopes to show folks a proof copy of the book. He is sure it will be enjoyed.

Governor appointments

Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault

Governor Sean Parnell appointed Donna Erickson to the Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault. The council provides planning and coordination of services to victims of domestic violence or sexual assault and their families, as well as to perpetrators, and provides crisis intervention and prevention programs.

Erickson, of Unalakleet, is a village agent for Bering Air, Inc. She has served on the Bering Sea Women's Group Board of Directors for two terms and was a safe home provider for 25 years. PBS documented Donna's personal life story of abuse and healing in a special documentary that aired nationally, entitled, "The Burden of Silence." Erickson is a board member for Unalakleet Evangelical Covenant Church, former group leader for Family Wellness Warriors, past member of InterAct Ministries of Alaska Policy Council, past parent member for RuralCAP Headstart Program Child Development Policy, and former member of the Advisory Education Committee for the Bering Straits School District. Erickson is appointed as a representative from a rural community of 7,500 or fewer residents, not connected by road or rail to Anchorage or Fairbanks.

Natural Resources Conservation and Development Board

Governor Parnell reappointed Cheryl Thompson to the Natural Resources Conservation and Development Board. The five-member board, composed of land users, receives and reviews reports regarding the use of soil resources and holds public hearings and meetings to determine if land is being used in a manner consistent with sound soil and water conservation practices. Additionally, the board recommends action to provide for the effective and orderly development of agricultural, forest and grazing land.

Thompson, of Nome, has owned a gardening business in Nome for 20 years. She taught sub-Arctic horticulture and gardening as an adjunct instructor at the University of Alaska

Fairbanks northwest campus and at the university's Cooperative Extension Service in Nome. Thompson has organized, led, and hosted the Nome Garden Tour since 2003. She is reappointed to a seat reserved for a resident of Northwest Alaska or the Arctic.

Sitnasuak Native Corporation

Why Shareholders Deserve Much Better

As most of you know, in 2009 all was going incredibly well at Sitnasuak Native Corporation. The company just achieved record breaking sales of over $220 Million and profits over $14 million. SNC had never performed so well, not even close and this was the back of the previous year that was also record setting. This was the last year that Robbie Fagerstrom was President of SNC and Homer Hoogendorn as Chairman of the Board of Directors.

That year, a decision was made by Robbie Fagerstrom to terminate Neal Foster for mismanagement and not being forthright with the SBA. Fagerstrom also reprimanded Mike Wassmann for not informing the Board and Fagerstrom of Fosters wrong doings.

Foster and Wassmann then convinced other Board Members to remove Fagerstrom so they leveled accusations that have now been proven false by SNC's own attorneys. Foster and a small group of Board Members have managed to remove Board Members that disagreed with them. They have eliminated shareholders from the SNC election ballots and played proxy vote misconceptions. Most recently the Board voted 5-4 not to allow Fagerstrom and Hoogendorn on the SNC Ballot. They gave no reason why, they feel that they are above the policies and values of SNC. This is not the way to run a company or for one to conduct oneself. There is no longer a sense of right and wrong – only what benefits a small group of people. These actions have damaged SNC Shareholders greatly.

The results of these actions have been very damaging to SNC Shareholders. The Company has consistently failed to achieve a fraction of the success that it had achieved in the final three years that Fagerstrom and Hoogendorn were in leadership positions at SNC. The 8a companies have gone from making $7-14 million dollars in profits per year under Fagerstrom to losing millions year after year for the last three years. The current leadership has yet to make a profit from the 8a government contracting business despite numerous promises. This group has made promises that have never been met. The results have been that tens of millions of dollars of lost profits and therefore tens of millions of dollars in lost dividends for shareholders.

As you can see from the chart below since 2009 when you compare the profits of SNC under the last three years of Fagerstrom/Hoogendorn versus Foster and Company you see the devastating damage to shareholder value:

Fagerstrom/Hoogendorn	Foster and Company
SNC Profits:	SNC Profits:
2009: $14.5	2012: 5.9
2008: 6.9	2011: 1.0
2007: 9.9	2010: 2.3
Total 31.3 Million	Total 9.2 Million

The new Board leadership and Management have a track record of failure and continue to fail. The Chairman and the majority of the board continue to support this team despite their failure. Dividends will soon be a thing of the past or greatly reduced due to lack of profits. The Shareholders have been deceived for three years straight by the current leadership by covering up their failures and keep anyone off the Board who will hold them accountable.

While profits for the shareholders have fallen drastically the Board pays more Board fees than ever before to Board members. Board Members that support the current leadership receive thousands and in some cases over the last few years tens of thousands of dollars in fees. Under Fagerstrom and Hoogendorn, even when the company was making tens of millions of dollars such Board fees were not awarded to Board Members.

Since the majority of the board refuses to take responsibility for their failings the Shareholders need to act before SNC is no longer a viable company and all future dividends are lost.

Before our children's future is lost we must make a change.

You can restore a bright future for SNC by voting in Robbie Fagerstrom and Homer Hoogendorn.

Additionally, the board focused on regional fisheries, setting prices for this year's anticipated sac roe herring fishery and approving the future construction of new tender vessels.

Outside Entity Funding (OEF) grants awarded

The board of directors awarded more than $760,000 in grant funding to cities, tribes and nonprofit groups during the meeting through NSEDC's Outside Entity Funding program. The grant funds will be spread across 21 applicants from NSEDC member communities and one regional applicant. NSEDC budgets $1 million annually for this program, with $60,000 available for grants in each of the 15 member communities and $100,000 for grants that have a region-wide impact.

This year, the $100,000 in regional funding will go toward a request from Kawerak for the Bering Strait Health Consortium Nursing Degree Program. The board has funded this program in the past, which provides funding to train regional residents as nurses. After completing the two-year nursing degree program-much of it conducted in Nome-the nurses agree to work at the Norton Sound Regional Hospital in Nome. Three nurses from the first cohort under this program are already working at the hospital. This round of funding will support the second cohort of four regional students.

At the community level, OEF grants will fund elder lunch programs, youth centers and programs, community facility and equipment upgrades, and infrastructure improvements. Entities in each member community are encouraged to apply for OEF grants. Applications are reviewed by a local committee, which passes on their funding recommendations to NSEDC's full board for approval. As in the past, the NSEDC board approved all recommendations received from the community review committees this year. Communities that do not utilize their full OEF funding can apply the balance toward future years.

Koyuk multi-use facility funded

The NSEDC board also approved a separate funding request from City of Koyuk for $300,000 toward a multi-use community facility. A joint venture between the City of Koyuk and the Native Village of Koyuk, the proposed 4,600-square-foot building will include a youth center, commercial kitchen, cultural center, emergency response center, and lodging facilities, among other uses. The facility will provide a much-needed meeting, lodging and working space in the community while also providing local employment during its construction. The total cost of the project is projected at $1.6 million.

Koyuk is the most recent recipient of NSEDC funding for a multi-purpose building. At their January meeting, the board approved $300,000 for Shaktolik. In 2012, NSEDC pledged $300,000 for a facility in Teller for the Mary's Igloo Traditional Council. In the past decade, NSEDC has dedicated funding for similar facilities in White Mountain, Golovin, Brevig Mission, Unalakleet and Savoonga.

Herring fishery slated, prices set

NSEDC/Norton Sound Seafood Products (NSSP) is again planning to facilitate a sac roe and bait herring fishery this year in cooperation with Icele Seafoods. Ice conditions prevented the fishery from occurring last year, and the board is hopeful that weather conditions will allow NSEDC to make this early-season opportunity available to fishermen this year.

The NSEDC Board of Directors voted to set the pricing structure for the upcoming fishery at $350 a ton for herring with 10 percent roe. The pricing will be set on a sliding scale of $20 per full percentage point, meaning fishermen would receive $330/ton for 9 percent roe or $370/ton for 11 percent roe. The base percentage accepted for sac roe will be 7 percent at $200/ton. Anything under 7 percent roe will be purchased as bait herring for regional fisheries at $100/ton.

Tender vessels approved

As NSEDC continues to dedicate energy and resources toward maintaining its aging regional tender fleet, the board of directors voted to pursue new vessels. Board members directed NSEDC's staff to work with Kvichak Marine in Seattle to pursue the development of two shallow-draft aluminum vessels that could carry RSW tanks capable of carrying 70,000 pounds of fish. The vessels would also have a fish pump and deck space for totes. The first vessel, to be named the Paul C. Johnson, would be ready for the 2014 season with a second vessel to follow in 2015.

Golovin to receive energy-saving LED streetlights

The NSEDC board approved a Community Energy Fund request from the City of Golovin for approximately $42,000 to install new LED streetlights in the community. Each NSEDC member community has access to $1 million in Community Energy Fund monies to apply toward the development of more efficient and cost-effective energy systems.

The Golovin funding will cover the replacement of 40 existing streetlamps along with five additional new lights to cover new homes and the new water plant in the community. It is estimated the new LED lights could reduce electrical usage by as much as 58 percent per lamp. Golovin provides its own utility service through Golovin Power and Utility.
