Council OKs pursuing grants for Richard Foster building

By Diana Haecker

The Nome Common Council met in a regularly scheduled meeting Monday night to discuss more museum building business and a host of other topics before going into an executive session.

Before the Richard Foster building topic was tackled, Nome citizen Jim Stimpfle approached the Council during the citizen comment period, requesting that the body extend the contract with the Nome Chamber of Commerce on running the Nome Visitor and Convention Bureau from one year to three years.

In the last council meeting councilman Stan Andersen argued that the city may consolidate visitor bureau services with the future Richard Foster building and extend the contract for one year instead of the requested five years.

Stimpfle said that a five-year contract makes more sense to allow for planning various long-term projects and hiring staff.

He proposed a three-year contract if the Council was not willing to sign a five-year contract. "We need the Council to make a decision today," Stimpfle said, "so we can go ahead and hire a new visitor bureau director."

Bob Hafner with the Chamber of Commerce directed this question at Stan Andersen: "Do you only want to take us for one more year because you want to take over operations of the visitor center yourself?"

Andersen responded that yes, that is his thinking down the road as staff and resources could be relocated to the museum building.

This prompted a question from Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Barb Nickels, "What about space allocation? Nobody has mentioned space for a Visitor Center in the museum building. All I hear is that there is a crunch for space, crunch, crunch, crunch."

Richard Beneville commented that Front Street would be stripped of yet another tourism attraction if the visitor center were to move to a future museum site off Front Street.

The Council agreed to meet the Chamber of Commerce halfway and voted favorably on Stan Andersen's motion include an amendment that would extend the contract to a total of three years.

In the absence of Mayor Denise Michels, Stan Andersen presided over the meeting with Councilmembers Jerald Brown, Josie Stiles, Tom Sparks, Louie Green, Sr. present and Randy Pomeranz present via teleconference.

Under new business, two resolutions relating to the future Richard Foster building were brought to the table.

One resolution sought to authorize the city manager to participate in the Alaska Dept. of Commerce, Community and Economic Development grant program for Library construction and major expansion matching.

ECI/Hyer architect Brian Meissner was present via teleconference to explain the particulars. He said that the strategy is to create lease space

City seeks funds for Nome Port expansion

By Diana Haecker

Gold fever, fishing season, cargo deliveries and the annual construction season rush are rolled into one mad burst of activity during the short Nome summers.

This year is no different.

The chokepoint is the Port and Small Boat Harbor of Nome, where they all comes together.

The new Gold Rush, courtesy of the Discovery reality TV show "Bering Sea Gold", has brought more than 94 gold dredges and their support vessels to the harbor, all vying for space to hide inside when the weather gets nasty.

Barges with fuel, goods and construction material for Nome and the surrounding communities are arriving daily, eager to offload their cargo at one of the two outer cell docks on the causeway, the east dock in the harbor or the boat ramp at the Snake River.

Research vessels call on the Port of Nome to resupply and conduct crew changes.

Sailboats arrive in the safe haven and sit inside until weather allows them to continue their journey.

A fishing fleet of 20 vessels comes in and out, delivering red king crab or – for the first time in two decades – chum to the fish dock.

When the sun shines, when the ocean is flat and the gold dredging fleet is outside working their claims, life is good. But as soon as weather quits cooperating and choppy waves send gold dredgers back inside, the harbor is full.

"We have boats shoved into every nook and cranny," says outgoing Harbormaster Joy Baker, who has seen Nome's port grow for 15 years. "The other day, we had to stack boats four deep on the south wall," she said.

As soon as barges arrive to offload their cargo, it gets even busier.

Harbor staff have to chase down the owners of the dredges and get them to move their vessels in order to accommodate cargo-offloading barges at the barge ramp.

In addition, the barge ramp is used to haul out or launch boats, which increases the busyness at that

Letters

Dear Nome,

The “Rotten Apple” letter by our editor last week is so very correct on several counts. The historical mining city of Nome is surrounded with a beautiful tundra and arctic coastline. As the letter stated, it all is becoming littered with more trash, cigarette butts, beer cans, beer bottles, fecal matter, urine, and toilet paper. New road signs are shot up to the point to be almost unreadable. Oh, I forgot to include the spit on the sidewalks and streets.

Folks, the campers and miners cannot be blamed for all of the increase in this issue. They may be just following the examples the residents of Nome and the surrounding area have been setting for a long time. I saw these issues on my first visit to Nome 12 years ago. I remember being saddened by the sight of the romantic gold rush streets, beaches, and roadsides being treated as a trash dump. Why do we and our visitors have to walk around the spit and vomit on our sidewalks? When did spitting in public become acceptable? Glacial sand is not the only reason to leave your shoes at the door!

The concept of private property seems to have been lost in a fog. The disrespect shown when citizens use a private walkway or front porch as a shortcut and trash dump is not the image I want anyone to take away with them. The holiday week was the final nail for me. I have bitten my tongue many times as my husband has to repeatedly pick up cans, broken beer-liquor bottles, toilet paper, and soiled diapers from the roadside bordering our property. Picking berries is often marred by having to also pick trash! But when a male and female in a car stop in our driveway after traveling on a road more than 90 miles in length, both proceeding to urinate right in our visual site, I will not be “polite” any longer. Nomeites cannot point at others when we are setting the example. The rot of the rotten apple has been in the barrel a long time, just spreading at a faster rate during times when more people are here. The two yearly cleanups are great and very effective but the pride and respect needs to be a year round effort for all of us.

Sound Off

To the Nome City Council and To whom it may and should concern:

This is a critique of the Iditarod Finish here in Nome, and one that is long, very long overdue! I long ago upon departing the Mayor’s Office offered the new mayor advice on what needed to be done to continue to have the Iditarod finish and all of the visitors that come to see a very unique event, a “World Class Event,” right here in Nome but was then rebuffed by the mayor. We are seeing the completion of Iditarod here in Nome continue to become a reduced function of what was a World Class Event, now declining and approaching a northwest Alaska fiasco. The City only bothers to show up for the first musher coming in and barely makes time to go the Awards Ceremony, only giving a welcome, with no active participation. The City does not show any real gratitude for these very unique individuals who trek across Alaska emulating that historic past, our past, our very Alaska Native past, taking that history of Nome into the future all the while letting the world get to know Nome.

We are not solving the continued attrition of housing for the mushers completing the Iditarod; we are not

Turn on the Spigot

Offshore mining lease sales generate big money for the State of Alaska, but the City of Nome gets none of it. The money goes into the Permanent Fund and the state’s general fund. Some of this money needs to be diverted to Nome.

When there is an oil spill, who rides to the rescue? City of Nome. There is no DEC staff in Nome. Who maintains the harbor? City of Nome. Who provides the emergency police response? City of Nome. Who provides fire and ambulance response? The people of Nome. Whose food bank reserves are depleted? Whose housing availability becomes acute? Whose reputation and environment is trashed? The residents of Nome have taken a big hit from negative publicity due to folks who are not a real part of our town. There is a bill before the Legislature— HB 181 “Mining Lease Revenue Sharing” that could help us.

The House Community and Regional Affairs Committee came to Nome and held a hearing Saturday at 9:30 a.m. at City Council Chambers. A handful of City and Utility officials, one mining representative, two members of the press and one member of the public were present at the poorly publicized meeting. If folks have comments they can contact our Representative Neal Foster (see his report this issue). It’s Nome’s golden offshore sands. Let’s turn on the spigot and divert some of the gold mining lease sale revenue to our town. —N.L.M.—

COMMEMORATING— A ship called the Bernard Explorer recently left Nome to retrace the route of the Mary Sachs, an support vessel for the Canadian expedition ship Karluk. The Karluk was the flag ship of the Canadian Arctic Expedition, the first Canadian government expedition to the western Arctic, between 1913-1918. The Karluk sailed from Nome on July 13, 1913 and became trapped in pack ice and drifted with the ice westward. The ship sank on January 15. The supply ship Mary Sachs’ captains were Peter Bernard and Joe Bernard. This summer, the Bernard Explorer under caption Bob Bernard, grand-nephew of Joe Bernard, is heading to Sachs Harbor on Banks Island to plant two plaques in honor of those who perished on the expedition. The Mary Sachs wrecked near Sachs Harbor and crew of the Bernard Explorer hope to find relics or remains of the schooner.

Port commission hears of over-crowding at Port and harbor

By Diana Haecker

The Nome Port Commission met last week in their first regularly scheduled meeting since May.

Outgoing Harbormaster Joy Baker introduced new Harbormaster Lucas Stotts. Baker is staying on as a “special agent” (as acting commission chair Randy Romanesko remarked) to work on port expansion plans, harbor special projects and to help to smoothen the transition time. Terrie Perkins has been promoted to be the new Harbormaster Assistant. Ashley Hagon is office and field support staff and Dustin Bell is the new dock watch and maintenance worker.

Commissioner Jimmy Adams announced that this would be his last port commission meeting as he is leaving Nome to become a “snowbird” and spend more time on the Big Island of Hawai’i.

Port commissioners Charlie Lean, Jim Adams, Doug Johnson, Mike Sloan and Iura Leahu were present and in absence of chair Jim West Jr., commissioner Randy Romanesko presided over the meeting.

Lucas Stotts gave his first Harbormaster report and told the Commissioners that it is as busy as ever at the Port of Nome. He said that Bowhead showed up with a tandem rig, one tug boat pulling two barges stacked six containers high.

The Pro-West barge Wendy O. is also waiting to offload a big load of eighteen 106-foot long girders destined for the Snake River replacement bridge. “We are very full with barges at the moment, trying to load and unload,” said Stotts.

He reported that dock space continues to be tight as bad weather keeps people from working. Gold dredges and other port-using vessels are rafted at times three and four vessels next to each other in order to accommodate everyone inside the harbor.

This set the stage for additional discussion on how to the City of Nome could manifest funds needed to improve the inner harbor overcrowding. Joy Baker said that the Alaska Dept. of Transportation offers a Harbor Facility Grant program but those grants do not pay for dredging or sheet pile and also won’t finance the construction of the additional dock needed on the causeway as the DOT interprets that location to be part of the Port, and not the Small Boat Harbor.

As envisioned in the port expansion plans, a middle dock would be placed between the existing West-

Gold dock and the City dock. According to the DOT’s harbor facility grant website, “the intent of the Harbor Facility Grant Program funding is to assist municipalities or regional housing authorizes only with the construction phase of small boat harbor facilities.” As such it pays for uplands development as in installing facilities (i.e. toilets) and the installation of floats. It may not be used to fund the development of the engineering studies, land acquisition or bidding documents, i.e. plans and specifications.

It is a competitive matching grant program with limited annual funding.

Baker said that the City is considering not applying for the DOT grant because its deadline is looming on August 1 and a confirmed source for the match funds has not yet been found.

In this context, Baker suggested that funds appropriated by the legislature could be used as leverage to obtain the DOT grant, which requires a 50/50 match.

“However, the grant application is due before we can receive a commitment on any legislative funds being available,” explained Baker.

DOT renews contract for helicopter passenger service to Little Diomed

By Diana Haecker

Last week Erickson Air-Crane Incorporated announced that the Alaska Dept. of Transportation has renewed a one-year contract to provide weekly passenger and cargo transport services to Little Diomed under the essential air service program.

Erickson recently bought Evergreen Helicopters and continues Evergreen’s service to Diomed.

The service entails transporting mail, cargo and passengers on a weekly basis between Nome and Little Diomed.

“Evergreen Helicopters has been delivering mail in Alaska on a United States Postal Service contract for 20 years, and is involved with the Essential Air Service program for the last year,” said Chief Executive Officer of Erickson Udo Rieder. “We are proud to continue this vital service, which keeps passengers, groceries, mail, supplies and more moving between Little Diomed and the mainland.”

The Essential Air Service program sets aside federal funding to subsidize air service to remote locations with no other means of transportation.

For the lack of an airport and a port, getting on and off Little Diomed has been very challenging.

Little Diomed went for years without any regularly scheduled passenger service and people could leave or return to the island only when space in the helicopter was available during mail runs.

Erickson Air-Crane Incorporated also manufactures and operates the heavy-lift Erickson S-64 Air crane helicopter.

According to GCI TERRA Northwest’s website, one of these helicopters, nicknamed “Bubba”, is in town to lift heavy tower sections in place as they construct remote repeater sites between Unalakleet and Nome.

Pearl Mikulski with Kawerak Inc. confirmed that nothing has changed in regards to schedule or services with Erickson Air-Crane being the new owner of Evergreen Helicopters and providing the service to Little Diomed.

for a tenant in the new Richard Foster building.

In order to get the state grant, a municipality needs to apply, the applicants are vetted until two or so rise to the top and the legislature then approves money for the project. "The Nome library has a good chance but there is no guarantee that anything happens," Meissner said, cautiously optimistic.

The funds would then go towards building the library. That would then free up money to apply for a tenant building, which could be build behind the actual museum/library building.

Meissner said, in order to accommodate Kawerak Inc.'s Beringia Center of Culture and Science, the City needs to find $2.5 million in addition to the $16 million secured by the legislature.

"Why is the city applying for the grant and not Kawerak?" asked Councilwoman Josie Stiles. Meissner explained that it would leave the City in control of the space in case Kawerak Inc. changes its plans and moves out of the tenants' space to the Richard Foster building.

The motion to apply for a $1.5 million State grant carried unanimously.

The discussion continued for a similarly worded resolution, applying for a $ 1 million Rasmuson Foundation grant in an effort to get the funds for the building plus Kawerak's Beringia Center.

Councilman Tom Sparks said he was in favor of getting as much grant money as possible for the project.

City Manager Josie Bahnke agreed and said time is of the essence to make the August deadline to apply for the Rasmuson Tier II grant program. "We really can't allocate space until we have the money," Bahnke said.

The resolution to submit a letter of inquiry for a grant in the amount of $1 million from the Rasmuson Foundation to construct lease space carried. Councilwoman Josie Stiles cast the only 'nay' vote.

City Manager Bahnke reported that the City closed on the Commerce Bench property. With the title of the land, the City received a stack of paperwork 12-inches high containing environmental reports on the property.

The ECI/Hyer architects began their conceptual design phase and are drawing up floor plans for the new Richard Foster building.

They will be back in Nome in the first week of August.

Utility Manager John Handeland in his report to the Council said that several members of the University of Alaska, Unatuq LLC, the Native consortium owning Pilgrim Hot Springs (Bering Straits Native Corporation; Sitnasuak Native Corporation; Kawerak, Inc.; Norton Sound Economic Development Corporation; White Mountain Native Corporation; Teller Native Corporation; and Mary's Igloo Native Corporation), and a potential developer of the hot springs geothermal energy recently visited the hot springs and determined the location for test wells.

Councilman Jerald Brown, also vice president of BSNC, informed the council and Handeland that the drill rig and the pipes are on a barge heading towards Nome. Brown said the program appeared to be stalled.

"If additional cash is not provided, the drill is only here until the barge leaves," Brown said. With no information in front of them, the Council requested more information on the matter and scheduled a work session on Wednesday, July 24 at noon to discuss the potential to supplement Nome's power with geothermal energy.

Handeland also told the Council that the wind turbines are expected to spin and go online in mid-August.

Councilman Stan Andersen informed the council that his tenure is up for re-appointment to serve the board of directors of Norton Sound Health Corporation. The Council voted unanimously to reappoint Andersen.

He reported that the directors of NSHC are requesting ideas what to do with the old hospital. Andersen said that the building is assessed as in "fair condition", has some code problems and is mismatched in terms of heating efficiency. It costs $600,000 a year just to keep it in care and maintenance status, reported Andersen.

In other Council business,

- The Council approved in final passage an ordinance to allow the Alaska Dept. of Environmental Safety to install and operate mercury and heavy metal monitoring instrumentation.

- The Council approved an ordinance authorizing the city to buy real estate at Warren Place from the Nome Eskimo Community.

- The Council approved two Old St. Joe Hall's fee waiver requests from the University of Alaska and Norton Sound Health Corporation.

The Council went into an executive session to discuss personnel matters.

Background: The city requested $8 million from the Legislature for construction of a middle dock – between City Dock and WestGold Dock, but only received $500,000 for harbor projects from the Alaska legislature. The commission discussed ideas what the $500,000 could be spent on. There are numerous smaller projects that could be partially or completely funded with that money. It could go towards maintenance dredging of the causeway WestGold dock 2014; it could partially fund the replacement of failing fish dock fenders; to buy gravel material for upland development or as a partial match to the Dept. of Transportation harbor facility grant fund.

Charlie Lean expressed concern about the fish dock and pointed out that, for the first time in 25 years, there is a commercial chum fishery going on with two buyers – NSSP as well as Robin Thomas – and the entire dock is busy and in use. Romelesko agreed, saying that the fish dock needs replacement as it serves a very high-value facility.

The port commission did not take any action in this matter.

But the discussion brought up the question of focus for Commissioner Leahu. "For the last year we struggled to find focus and put money into priority projects," he said. "We need focus." Commissioner Jim Adams suggested to go back to the Harbor Strategic plan and find guidance in the document. City Manager Josie Bahnke said that the City is dealing with two things at once: to meet the future needs of the port and to keep up with maintenance and improving the existing facilities. "In order to apply for money, you have to have money," she said. "All these projects are priorities but the middle dock is the obvious priority."

Joy Baker agreed. "Our focus is to meet current needs," she said. "We are buried in boats. There are gravel barges, research ships, cargo barges, all trying to offload, change gear or to load up," said Baker. "One more dock would cut a big chunk out of our backlog. Right now we have vessels tying up outside cargo barges working at the dock just to do a crew change or take on water and fuel."

Since wharfage brings in revenue, it is in the interest of the port to allow cargo operations to go smoothly. Currently, harbor staff has to spend a good portion of the day to reposition the smaller gold dredge vessels to allow barges to come in and offload their cargo in the Small Boat Harbor and barge ramp. Baker made the case for a third dock as the obvious priority, and also for additional floats to tie up the dredges and other vessels from the small boat harbor in order to help reduce the turnaround time for cargo traffic. "We won't see the same volume in revenue from the dredges or small boats, but from barges being able to operate in a more efficient manner," Baker said.

In additional business discussed, the Army Corps of Engineers informed the city that the south bulkhead along the southern side of the old Snake River entrance is sub-par. The short section of the sheet pile wall on the very eastern end functions as a retaining wall only and is designed to prevent sand from migrating into the harbor. The shorter section of the wall is not meant to function as a dock, but the longer portion to the west, was in fact intended to serve as a barge dock facility. The Corps said in a letter to City Manager Josie Bahnke that after analysis, the Corps — who built the wall and bulkhead — found that the load-bearing surface needs to be restricted. From now on until a repair is made, no storage or commercial vehicles over 10,000 pounds is allowed within 30 feet of the face of the dock. This also goes for cranes, the Corps wrote in the letter to Bahnke. No crane loads, no truck traffic or storage is allowed within 30 feet of the wall. The Corps said that repairs are "contingent on receiving future funding."

In the meantime, harbor staff has not received any signs from the Corps that adequately warn port users of the restricted use at the south wall.

Commissioner Lean commented on the design of the connecting road from and to the Snake River replacement bridge. He requested of the city manager to comment to the DOT on the design of the sharp corners. "A truck with a 40-foot container load will have to swing onto the other lane to make the turn," Lean said. "That's port related as it will affect the turnaround time at the harbor." Lean requested that the city ask the DOT to come up with a design to realign Center Creek Road with the road coming off the new Snake River Bridge.

Joy Baker updated the commission on the status of the removal of the barge Lulu. Due to difficulties encountered, the city gave Q Trucking an extension through June 2014 to complete the removal.

Baker reported that an old abandoned fuel tank from Satellite Field that was hauled to the Port Pad many years ago was vandalized during the winter of 2011/2012. Someone drilled a hole in the tank in an effort to steal fuel. This resulted in spillage of old heavy used oil, which was cleaned up. The contaminated soil was excavated and placed in a diked containment for remediation.

Apparently, aeration is did not solve the problem and the contaminated soils were bagged up last week for shipping and disposal. The Port Commission will meet again on August 15.

Baker and new Harbormaster Lucas Stotts say that many times, barges and landing craft must wait their turn outside the port perimeters when it gets too crowded. They then need to jog or just point their nose into the wind and wait until weather passes and it's their turn to offload cargo.

Stotts added that he is seeing a trend of larger and larger vessels arriving for gold mining purposes. He said a new outfit intends to bring to Nome a 140-ft. dredge barge pulled by a tug with 10-and-a-half-foot draft, making it marginal for even the tug to enter the harbor.

Harbormaster Stotts has also noticed an increase of minor oil spills inside the harbor this summer. "I deal with them by deploying absorbent boom and other absorbents to contain the leaks and then work with the owners of the vessels to stop the ongoing problem," said Stotts in an email to the Nugget.

Properties left and right of Port Road are a good indicator of what is yet to come as gold dredge operators work on bigger and bigger vessels. On the other side of the harbor, Phoenix Marine is renting the city-owned pad to stage the construction of another large dredging jack-up rig.

Here are the numbers: From 2011 to 2012, the total dockings at the Port and small boat harbor increased from 271 to 436. In 2009, 18 dredges were registered vessels at the harbor. In 2010 the number grew to 22. In 2011, 39 dredges were at the harbor and in 2012 the number grew to 96 gold dredges.

The gold boom is undeniably underway and it happens to coincide with incessant news reaching Nome's shores of increased marine traffic due to the dramatic decrease of summer sea ice in the Arctic.

Support vessels for offshore resource exploration, cruise ships, research vessels, pleasure boats, Coast Guard vessels, fuel tankers and other cargo vessels are finding their way through the Bering Strait and Nome is the last stop to take on fuel, water and other supplies. "All we hear is that traffic is increasing and we're it," Joy Baker said. "But we need to be able to accommodate them."

City Manager Josie Bahnke said during last week's Port Commission meeting that the city is faced with a double-whammy: making sure that current needs are met, which they aren't, and making sure that the city is prepared for the future when vessel traffic is forecasted to dramatically increase.

"We have been working all possible sources of funding and now need help from the Alaska Legislature to secure state dollars to address the overcrowding and moorage issues," said Bahnke. She added that Senator Olson has toured the Port of Nome and is committed to help secure needed funding. "We will be working closely with his office this next session to get money in the capital budget. Our hope is to secure $8 million in state funds from the legislature next April," said Bahnke.

The first step for improvements is underway. A high ramp project was awarded to Pacific Pile recently. The high ramp will be constructed next to the existing launch-style boat ramp on Port Road.

A Snake River Float project is on hold for the lack of matching funds.

Last year, voters accepted a General Obligation bond package that bestowed $10 million on the City for port improvements. Of these $10 million, $1 million is allocated for study and design of a causeway extension; $4 million to build the high ramp and dredge a portion of the west side of the Snake River to minus 4 ft. in order to take the pressure off the Small Boat Harbor; and $5 million to build the middle dock, once partnering funds are found.

When several delegates and legislators with the Pacific Northwest Economic Region visited Nome on Friday, their public meeting with the Nome Common Council entailed one topic: port expansion. After a short introduction and welcome by Mayor Denise Michels, Baker took over and presented port realities to the high-powered visitors from different parts of Alaska and Canada. "Don't get me wrong, we love the gold rush and the activity, but we need to build new facilities to deal with the overcrowding," Baker told the delegates.

Since the gold dredging boom was partially made possible by a 2011 Dept. of Natural Resources mineral offshore lease sale — the only one in the state — city officials believe that the DNR should share some of the nearly $8 millions the state made by selling off the rights to dig for gold on the seafloor.

Representative Neal Foster sponsored House Bill 181, which didn't progress through the body during the last legislative session, but the House Community and Regional Affairs Committee held an unadvertised public hearing on HB 181 at the Nome City Council Chambers on Saturday morning. Only three members of the public attended in addition to city officials.

Rep. Foster explained his bill to the Nome Nugget, saying that the 2011 DNR offshore mineral lease sale prompted a spike in demand for docking space at the Nome harbor; space that the harbor doesn't have and can't afford to build. "While the state received revenue from this increase in dockings, there was no framework to help the city with the new infrastructure necessary to accommodate the increase in traffic. This legislation would help provide the necessary framework," explained Foster's legislative aide Paul Labolle.

Families vie with gulls for capelin feast on Nome beach

By Jim Menard,
Area Manager Norton Sound and
Kotzebue ADF&G

The capelin (also called cigar fish, gar, candle fish), hit the beach along Nome on the afternoon and evening of July 19. The increased gull activity tipped off residents who had been waiting for the capelin to show since June. A rush of gulls, dogs and people were soon flocking to the beach. People used garbage bags, pails, apple sacks, burlap bags, coolers, dip nets, colanders, soup ladles and strainers to gather capelin. A lot of kids just used their hands. Only dogs and gulls were observed catching capelin with their mouths.

The capelin would come in on several consecutive waves, then move off and return a few waves later or move in different directions down the beach, only to return to a previous location a short time later. The crowd ran and the birds flew to the different locations in a frenzied pursuit. It's a once-a-year spectacle that's always great fun to watch and participate in. Many people said they were getting extra fish to share with elders.

Red king crab

The Norton Sound commercial open access red king crab harvest totaled 101,000 pounds on Monday morning. This year's quota is 458,430 pounds for the open access portion of the fishery and 37,170 pounds for the Community Development Quota fishery. Thirty-five permit holders are registered for the open access fishery and 7 permit holders are registered for the CDQ fishery.

Norton Sound salmon

All Norton Sound salmon escapement projects are operating except for the Igloodik River tower. Rising water created turbid conditions, and as of Monday the crew had not been able to see fish in the river since Friday night, July 19.

Commercial chum salmon catches totaled more than 76,000 fish on July 21 and have exceeded the department forecast of 40,000 to 70,000 chum salmon harvest this season. The forecast for pink salmon was a commercial catch of 50,000 to 100,000 fish. However, only a few thousand pinks are likely to be harvested, and no pink-directed fishing openings are anticipated due to openings for more lucrative chum salmon fishing and because silver salmon fishery openings are expected later this month and in August.

Last week the department opened commercial chum salmon fishing for two 24-hour periods in sub-district 1 (Nome) in waters from Cape Nome east to Topkok Head, but no permit holders fished. These were the first commercial chum fishing openings in the area in many years. Some permit holders said they are waiting for the western portion of the subdistrict to open. The department will wait a little longer before a possible commercial fishing opening west of Cape Nome to allow for more chum salmon to enter the Nome River. In a number of years, more subsistence fishing effort occurs in the Nome River than in any other location in the subdistrict.

Unalakleet subdistrict

Sport fishing: In the Unalakleet River drainage, king salmon fishing is closed and the use of bait is banned until Aug. 15 or subsequent emergency order. The marine waters of the Unalakleet subdistrict are open seven days a week to gillnet fishing with gillnets restricted to six inches or smaller mesh size. Gillnet fishing reopened in the Unalakleet River drainage on July 22 with gillnets restricted to six inches or smaller through July 31. Beach seining is allowed in all marine waters and the Unalakleet River drainage seven days a week, but any king salmon captured must be immediately released in the water. The total commercial harvest to date is 29,870 chums, 2,135 pinks, 623 silvers and 33 sockeyes by 31 permit holders.

The North River tower escapement goals are kings, 1,200-2,600; chums, no goal established; pinks, 25,000; and silvers, $50-1,100 (aerial survey goal). The cumulative counts through July 21 are 378 kings, 3,786 chums, 24,252 pinks, 78 silvers and 6 sockeyes. Counts should be considered minimal. From July 1-10 the crew was unable to count a complete day because of high and turbid water. The average counting time from July 1-10 was 9 hours a day. The average third quarter point for king salmon passage is July 21. The average midpoint for chum passage is July 24.

No escapement goals are established for the Unalakleet River floating weir.

Cumulative counts through July 21 are 678 kings, 73,189 chums, 43,323 pinks, 331 silvers, and 159 sockeyes. The king count is double last year's count, but has fallen behind the two previous years for this date. The chum and silver counts are second best for this date in the four-year history of the project.

Shaktoolik subdistrict

Sport fishing: In the Shaktoolik River drainage, king salmon fishing is closed and the use of bait is banned until Aug. 15 or subsequent emergency order.

The marine waters of the Shaktoolik subdistrict are open seven days a week to gillnet fishing with gillnets restricted to six inches or smaller mesh size. Effective July 22, the Shaktoolik River drainage is open to gillnet fishing seven days a week with gillnets restricted to six inches or smaller. Beach seining is allowed in all marine waters and the Shaktoolik River drainage seven days a week, but any king salmon captured must be immediately released in the water. The total commercial harvest to date is 17,368 chums, 95 silvers and 11 sockeyes by 17 permit holders.

No escapement goals are established for the Shaktoolik sonar project. The cumulative passage through July 17 is 105,081 salmon with an estimated breakdown of 2,158 kings, 48,661 chums and 54,262 pinks.

Norton Bay subdistrict

The total commercial harvest to date is 28,080 chums, 33 pinks, 39 silvers, and 6 sockeyes by 12 permit holders. The chum catch is a record, surpassing the 21,973 chum salmon caught in 1978.

No escapement goals are established for the Igloodik River tower, now in its third year of operation. Cumulative counts through July 19 are 3,396 kings, 43,989 chums and 45,327 pinks. The king counts from the two previous years were 1,452 and 1,020 by this date, and chum counts were 21,243 and 44,707 fish.

Elim subdistrict

The first 48-hour commercial salmon fishing opening of the season ended at 6 p.m. July 22. Gear was restricted to 6 inches or smaller mesh. The area open was from west of Iron Creek to Carson Creek. Fishing was restricted to the western half of the area because of the poor chum counts at Kwinik River, but the Tubutulik River may reach its aerial survey goal. The total catch through July 21 was 60 chums, 19 pinks and 6 silvers.

The Kwinik River tower escapement goals are kings, 300-550; chums, 11,500-23,000; pinks, 8,400; and silvers, 650-1,300 (aerial survey goal). Cumulative counts through July 21 are 9 kings, 5,286 chums, 3,315 pinks and 3 silvers. The king count is the poorest on record, and the chum count is one of the poorest. The average third quarter point for kings is July 19, and the average 90 percent point for chums is July 20. The midpoint for pinks is July 22.

Golovin subdistrict

The first commercial salmon fishing opening of the season was for 48 hours and ended at 6 p.m. July 19. This was a pink-directed fishing opening with gear restricted to 4 1/2 inches or smaller mesh size. The catch totaled 506 chums, 1,028 pinks and 10 silvers by 8 permit holders.

The second 48-hour commercial chum salmon directed fishing opening ended at 6 p.m. July 22. Gear was restricted to 6 inches or smaller mesh. The catch from this opening totaled 296 chums, 58 pinks, and 26 silvers on the morning of July 21.

An aerial survey of the lower Niukluk River, Fish River and Boston Creek showed improving chum salmon numbers, but one of the poorest king surveys on record.

Nome subdistrict

The subsistence set gillnet schedule in the marine waters west of Cape Nome is from 6 p.m. Monday until 6 p.m. Saturday. The marine waters east of Cape Nome are open seven days a week. The fresh water subsistence area set gillnet schedule is from 6 p.m. Monday until 6 p.m. Wednesday and from 6 p.m. Thursday until 6 p.m. Saturday. Beach seining is allowed at the same time gillnetting is allowed through July 25 in both the marine waters and fresh water subsistence areas. Beginning July 26 beach seining is closed in the Nome subdistrict.

The Nome subdistrict escapement range goal of 23,000 to 35,000 chum salmon has been met and will easily be exceeded this year. A 24-hour commercial fishing opening in the Nome subdistrict from Cape Nome east to Topkok Head took place from noon July 23 to noon July 24. Gear was restricted to 6 inches or smaller mesh.

The Eldorado River weir escapement goal is 6,000-9,000 chum salmon. Cumulative counts through July 21 are 4 kings, 19,610 chums and 392 pinks. The average third quarter point for chum salmon passage is July 19.

The Nome River weir escapement goals are chums, 2,900-4,300; pinks, 3,200.

Cumulative counts through July 21 are 1,707 chums, 1,353 pinks, 5 silvers, and 6 sockeyes. The average midpoints are July 23 for chum salmon passage and July 29 for pink salmon.

The Snake River weir escapement goal is 1,600-2,500 chum salmon. Cumulative counts through July 21 are 3 kings, 1,685 chums and 347 pinks. The average midpoint for chum salmon passage is July 22 and for pink salmon is July 26.

No escapement goals are established for the Solomon River weir. Cumulative counts through July 21 are 690 chums, 638 pinks and 1 silver salmon.

The Glacial Lake weir escapement goal (aerial survey) is 800-1,600 sockeyes. Video data through July 18 show 2,251 sockeyes, 5 chums, 1 otter and 1 beaver counted at the weir. The department switched to the video system on July 14. Last year was the first year we switched to video system in late July after a successful trial period comparing video counts against human counters. Historically, the average third quarter point for sockeye salmon passage is July 18.

Port Clarence district

On July 19 the department raised the subsistence sockeye salmon catch limit in the Pilgrim River from 25 to 50 fish for the 2013 season.

The Pilgrim River weir escapement goal (aerial survey at Salmon Lake and Grand Central tributary to Salmon Lake) is 4,000-8,000 sockeyes. Cumulative counts through July 21 are 21 kings, 10,437 chums, 355 pinks and 10,838 sockeyes. Historically the average midpoint for sockeye salmon passage is July 18. The department's closure of the Pilgrim River to salmon fishing in mid-July in the previous four years probably has resulted in shifting the midpoint of sockeye passage to a later date. The average midpoint was July 15 for the years prior to fishing closures, and using that date results in a projection of 17,000 sockeyes passing through the weir this year.

Kotzebue

A big catch of more than 10,000 chum salmon by 29 permit holders took place during the normal 8-hour fishing period on July 18 in the Kotzebue area. Because of capacity concerns, the buyer has requested reduced fishing time. During a fishing opener of 4 hours on July 19, 26 permit holders caught just over 6,000 chum salmon. The buyer may need to further reduce fishing time or skip a day this week to catch up with the harvest volume. Reduced fishing time is normal for late July as the run builds. The cumulative catch is nearly 37,000 chums, and the harvest forecast for this year is 225,000 to 250,000 chum salmon depending on buyer capacity.

The crew at the Kobuk River test fish project started fishing on July 17, and the cumulative catch is 137 chums and 77 sheefish. The cumulative chum catch ranks seventh best out of 21 years through July 20. However, this year is tied with last year for the latest project start data, and this year's catch is double last year's catch for this date. Last year's catch for the season ranked third best out of 20 years.

Foster's Report

By Rep. Neal Foster Dist. 39

Hello everyone.

The communities that were hit by the Yukon spring flood disaster have started the long road to recovery. The Federal Emergency Management Agency is onsite in many locations and is working on plans for rebuilding. They are seeking bids to rebuild homes from Alaska construction firms and will be distributing rental assistance funds through this week. The State division of emergency management is working with FEMA to administer the rebuild program. They would like to partner with Alaska Housing Finance Corporation and the Cold Climate Research Center to come up with models for construction that are highly efficient and effective for the cold interior winters. Also, National Flood Insurance Program staff has set up a hotline to assist victims with information on building in a flood zone. 877-875-7681 or 907-792-4764.

Galena was the hardest hit. Water lines are still not working and people will be in emergency shelters for some time still. Much of the old town is below the mean high water line so many things are being considered in the rebuild including a land swap.

The FEMA coordinator Dolph Diemont has been impressed by the can do attitude of the local residents. He is hopeful that with the local effort and the 150 volunteers FEMA is planning to bring in that they'll be able to make some really good headway. Many groups are pooling resources to maximize the amount of help they can provide. SeaShare, Food Bank of Alaska, and the Salvation Army Alaska Division joined forces to create a supply chain that resulted in the delivery of 1,500 pounds of King salmon and halibut to Galena on Monday, July 8.

Disaster Recovery Centers are open in Galena and Fairbanks (for people who have not been able to make it home) and they will be open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. seven days a week. A Long-term Recovery Fund has been set up to receive donations to support Spring Flood recovery. It can be found at ready.alaska.gov/

On that site you can also find a wealth of information about how to move forward with meeting your individual needs such as applying for disaster relief. The FEMA registration deadline is August 26.

Just a reminder that Galena was not the only community hit. Circle sustained major damage. The FEMA Disaster Housing Assessment Team is expected to complete work in Circle today. They will determine if FEMA's Permanent Housing Construction program can be applied

There are a number of potential ballot initiatives in the works currently. The referendum to repeal the cuts on oil taxes has collected more than 51,000 signatures and turned them in to the division of elections. The division has 60 days to certify the signatures. If certified the people of Alaska will get an up or down vote on the repeal (of SB21) in the 2014 primary. There is also:

- "An Act increasing the Alaska minimum wage to $8.75 per hour effective January 1, 2015, $9.75 per hour effective January 1, 2016 and thereafter adjusted annually for inflation." The proposed wage would be adjusted based on a consumer price index for the Anchorage metropolitan area or $1 above federal minimum wage (whichever is more) and would not allow tips or gratuities to be applied toward that minimum wage. The application has been certified and booklets are being circulated by signature gatherers.

- "An Act to tax and regulate the production, sale and use of marijuana." The proposed law would legalize the growth, sale, and consumption of marijuana in the State. Consumers would need to be at least 21 years old and be limited to 1 ounce. Public consumption would be illegal. It would set production and distribution of the plant up as a regulated industry and there would be a $50 per ounce excise tax. The initiative provides for fairly extensive local control and would allow for the prohibition of cultivation, manufacturing, and testing facilities and/or retail stores. The Application has been certified and booklets are being circulated by signature gatherers.

- "An Act providing for protection of Bristol Bay wild salmon and waters within or flowing into the existing 1972 Bristol Bay Fisheries

The Dock Walk

By Diana Haecker

Five racks with Kids Don't Float life jackets are placed around the harbor area, West Beach and Belmont Point. While the program originated with the idea to keep children safe while boating, it expanded to include personal floatation devices for adults. Maria Bailey with the State's Dept. of Health and Social Services' Injury Prevention Program told the Nome Nugget, "Historically, Kids Don't Float program was intended for children only; although the program's mission is to prevent children from drowning, we felt that the best way to teach children to "think safety" is by example. We now provide a few larger sizes for adults to also don when on or near the water. Printed on the back of the adult sizes is "Wear it Alaska!", as we want to encourage everyone to be safe on the water."

"We welcome any and all people to take as many KDF jackets as they will put to use," Harbormaster Lucas Stotts said. "We have plenty and restock the boards daily. People can also stop by the harbor office and pick up sizes they need if they can't locate them on the boards."

The activity at the port was busy last week. On Tuesday, July 16, the Northland Services barge Nunaniq arrived to offload cargo and load village freight. The US Coast Guard cutters Naushon and Spar departed.

On July 17, the sailing vessel Bernard Explorer departed the harbor and headed through the Northwest Passage. The Dugong and Hiattus, both 80-ft. vessels, arrived. They are setting up their equipment and will be mining outside of Safety Sound this summer. The Wendy O. and the Pro-West II barge arrived to do some work for a day.

On Thursday, July 18, Crowley Marine's vessel Nachik arrived to deliver fuel to the east dock. The USCG cutter Naushon arrived to take on fuel before heading south to their homeport in Ketchikan. UIC Bowhead-Crowley, a joint venture of Crowley Marine and Ukpeaġvik Iñupiat Corporation (Barrow's Village Corporation) arrived with the Maia H. tug towing the barges Madison Bay and the 240-1 in tandem. They were here to stack cargo on the dock and reload their barge before heading north for arctic villages and other deliveries. They loaded landing crafts over the next few days for arctic deliveries, using the crane they had onboard.

On July 19, Alaska Logistics' vessel Fish Hawk and the Logistic Provider barge arrived for cargo, to take on fuel and for repairs. The Wendy O. and the barge ProWest II departed the port.

On July 20, the landing craft Nunaniq arrived and was chartered to Bowhead for arctic deliveries. It was loaded alongside the Madison Bay barge with their crane. Alaska Logistics' vessel Fish Hawk departed with the Logistic Provider barge headed to Golovin Bay.

On July 21, the sailing vessel Empiricus departed Nome and headed for the Northwest Passage. It plans to stop in Greenland for the winter. The landing craft Nunaniq left, sailing north for arctic deliveries. West Construction's landing craft Devon arrived with the BC-151 barge, waiting for clear weather so they can load rock at Cape Nome, destined for Unalakleet. Bowhead's tug Maia H. departed with the Madison Bay barge and 240-1 barge. They were assisted by Alaska Logistics' tug Ocean Mariner and Cruz Marine's tug Millie Cruz.

On July 22, the cruise ship Bremen arrived in the early morning and departed at midnight, headed toward Russia. Crowley's tug Nachik and fuel barge 165-2 departed, heading north for arctic fuel deliveries. They will return in late August.

The landing craft Greta arrived in Nome and began their charter with Bowhead to transport freight to northern villages.

As of press time on Monday, July 23, there is only one sailboat in the harbor, Dodo's Delight.

CHARTING THE WATERS— Harbormaster Lucas Stotts updates the Port schedule at the Harbormaster's office.

TANDEM BARGE— The UIC Bowhead-Crowley tug Maia H. arrived in Nome pulling two barges in tandem, the Madison Bay, left, as well as the 240-1, right.

ARCTIC TRAVELERS— The cruise ship Bremen docked in Nome on July 22 with over 100 arctic adventurers from Europe on board.

even providing enough housing for those willing to pay to come to Nome to keep this town on the map. This year is what is a continuing attrition of visitors coming to Nome to see the Iditarod and its past grand celebration. A celebration and recognition of the mushers that keep our northwest Alaska location in the eye and mind of the news thru-out the world. It's that projection that makes Nome a destination for our year-round touring, let alone for the Iditarod, it's our projector. We are not accommodating the need for musher housing, these are the very people who project Nome to the world as a destination and we still haven't found a way to accommodate them? Shouldn't we offer stipends or financial assistance to those that are willing to accommodate them?

Once again there was no siren to greet and allow our visitors the notice of an arriving musher. The excuse this year was that the fire siren was frozen. Is it so much to test this system to know that it works for those Iditarod mushers that keep the name of Nome on the map? This system is the City of Nome's. This seems to be a continuing problem for more than just this year. Shall we assume that the page-out system doesn't work, and it hasn't in the past, what will the firemen respond to?

Front Street lighting was and is deplorable. The lighting that is in place was not even turned on or was sorely malfunctioning. Does anyone in City Hall really care about this "slipping away" of our world-class event connection? Those that were recording the event could not see or even read under the monument. This Iditarod finish belongs to Nome as long as we make it happen for all! Either we start over again to make this a class event or only too soon it will be gone, just like the All Alaska Sweepstakes.

You have, no we have, an icon that is treated like a piece of trash, The Iditarod Trail Monument. The replacement of this monument is not easily accomplished and if we continue to treat this monument the way the City treated our first one, and has to date with the current one, you will be looking for replacement in the very near future. If you are to leave the monument out-of-doors, then the City must build a shelter to keep the monument underneath such. At worst, we need to keep the rain and snow from penetrating the cracks in the logs. The monument is already in need of another exterior treatment this year to further protect it from moisture. The City needs to adopt some rules for use of the monument, as the news media continue to abuse the monument with their special needs to mount cameras and sound equipment without any regard to the longevity of the monument.

The sound system on Front Street has degraded to be impossible to understand. The entire amplification system needs to be replaced. Cannot anyone in the City Hall know that? Have you all shied away from your responsibilities to protect the Iditarod and project Nome as a place that cares for the visitor. Do you not hear the comments from those visitors about the lack of concern? Too many visitors this time referred to the Nome Iditarod finish as something that they did not have to do or return to again. The City needs to double at least for the Iditarod finish the number of lights on Front Street if for no other reason—the Iditarod—especially now that we have gone to the LEDs which actually project less effective surface lighting.

Again there are bright spots in the Nome system. Public Works continues to do a superb job of preparing the chute, preparing the dog lot and preparing the arrival ramp up off the Bering Sea, although sanding of the streets to abrade the glare ice would help outsiders from injury. The Nome Police Department almost always leads the musher to the chute without a hitch. The continued use and preparation of the Mini-Convention Center for Iditarod Headquarters, the preparation of the dog lot; although an expansion of the public use facilities in the MCC is something that must be reviewed. A special thanks is due for continuing to keep the X-mas lights on during the Iditarod; an expansion of those lights on our main thoroughfares and at the Iditarod monument should be in order and not just for the Iditarod.

There is no question that there is more than one responsibility for the successful function of the Iditarod Trail Race and its completion here in Nome. However, it falls on the City of Nome to make sure that we are not the cause of Iditarod's failure to come to Nome and worst of all, ceasing to exist. It will fall very heavily on the City of Nome for failing to take care of this once in our lifetime, fantastic event and its completion here in Nome.

Isn't it about time the City of Nome request of the State of Alaska Department of Transportation to emplace an overhead standard light pole suspension system such as they have in every other major municipality to display and hang all of our Iditarod signage, international flags and banners? Such an Installation will carry far more than the Iditarod banners throughout the year and accommodate many other Nome entities and purposes throughout the year.

I ask that the City respond to each issue listed above, not only because they were formally presented to the City of Nome but to note that they were presented and reviewed by the City's elected Common Council. We can not let this deteriorating situation go any longer. The race in itself has its own problems to be addressed by the ITC Board. But we, the City of Nome, are the responsible entity for the finish and its successful projection to the world. The City of Nome should be the cause for others to consider the continuation of this event. Please let us not be the cause for the ending of our Iditarod.

The City's involvement was long ago committed to by the then Mayor Robert H. Renshaw, who told the mushers at the 2nd Anchorage Start and Position Drawing Banquet that if they could mush all the way to Nome over the Iditarod (now National Historic) Trail, that not only would the City of Nome sound the fire siren but that the least he would do as mayor of Nome was to show up at the finish line and officially greet them upon their feat, the completion of the Last Great Race on earth. However, that tradition only lasted for 31 years.

We must never forget that every musher of the Iditarod is, in the words of Mayor Robert H. Renshaw, a champion; we must continue to honor all of their completions of this ultimate challenge with the recognition and treatment of a champion. They who can finish the Iditarod Trail Race here in Nome at the end of the Iditarod National Historic Trail are and should be treated, as they are, "Our Champions."

Ever so Sincerely Requested,
Leo B. Rasmussen

Obituary

Charlotte Jane Perkins
April 28, 1929- January 17, 2013

Charlotte “Jane” Scott was born to Alaskan pioneers and miners Tolbert and Vallie Scott on April 28, 1929 in Nome, in their family home on Steadman Street. The daughter of gold miners and a pre-statehood legislator, Jane grew up with a deep and profound love and commitment to her cherished town of Nome and for the great state of Alaska. Jane graduated from Nome High School with the class of 1947 then attended the University of Southern California to obtain her teaching degree. On December 6, 1952, she married her love Don Perkins, a young schoolteacher from Missouri who had been teaching in Council. Together they had four children who were raised in the Nome community Jane and Don so deeply loved. In 2005 Jane moved to Anchorage to be closer to medical care and lived with her daughter Julie and family. Even though she lived in Anchorage for the past eight years, she reminded everyone that she ‘was just visiting’ as Nome was her one and only home.

Jane was a proud member of The Pioneers of Alaska, Igloo #1 volunteering much time to the organization and their yearly Nome events. She was also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star. She volunteered countless hours and years to Boards and Commissions throughout the state including the Alaska Public Offices Commission, and the Alcohol and Beverage Control Board. The Board she most loved and was deeply dedicated was the Board of Directors for the Norton Sound Health Corporation in which she gave decades of service. Her desire to see first class health care delivered to the citizens of Nome and the surrounding villages was one of Jane’s core values. While her ‘career’ consisted mostly of raising her four children, she also worked as a schoolteacher and managed Perkins Rentals for many, many years. Two of the many legacies Jane leaves to her children and grandchildren are the importance of giving back to your community, and the importance of family. Jane would tell you to give of your time to make your community better and to love your family unconditionally, always. Jane was quite the Nome historian with a photographic memory. She and her brother Bob would tell lively stories of old Nome, the mining days, the colorful characters of the old days, state politics and the decades of progression creating the town of Nome we all so dearly love today.

Jane was widowed at the young age of 50 when Don lost his life to cancer. Her children remember a devoted and strong mother who lived by example in how to be resilient while moving forward, showed abundant strength and courage, and lived each day with optimism and gratitude. Her children and family will remember her as loving, giving, loyal, proud, compassionate and strong. She will be deeply missed by her family and friends.

Jane’s interests and passions included; first and foremost her family and especially her grandchildren, her cherished friendships, yearly trips to Kona, Hawaii, celebrating holidays, service to her community and State, berry picking and time spent in the country, playing pinochle, antiques and ‘bottle digging’ especially in her younger years, The history of Nome, quilting and making hand made items for her children and grandchildren, she looked forward to Nome family and friends visiting, to the annual Nome Christmas Party held in Anchorage, and in the more recent years going to movies, lunch, visiting, and her outings with her dear friend Janet in Anchorage.

Jane is survived by her four children: Janna Fowler of Washington (husband Marlin, daughters Kylee and Kendra), Wes Perkins of Nome (wife Terrie, son Casey and daughter Darcee), Nate Perkins of Nome (wife Christine, deceased) sons Jasen and Jeremy), Julie Vincek of Anchorage (husband Darrell, daughters Taylor and Tyra); her dear brother Robert F. Scott of Nome, nephew Charles Burnett of Nome, special friend, angel and caregiver Janet Nalley, many treasured and life-long friends including, “The Coffee Gang” of the Polar Cub who for decades had coffee together each morning while discussing the ‘happenings’ of Nome while being a web of life-long support for one another; relatives in North Carolina.

Jane was preceded in death by her parents Tolbert and Vallie Scott, her husband Donald E. Perkins, brother Wilson Scott, sisters Margaret Scott and ‘Baby Scott,’ sister-in-law Norma Scott and daughter-in-law Christine Perkins.

Summer Fires

One spark and a flame lights.
Bone dry conditions, and from the one flame . . . a fire ignites.
Nature rages out of control,
Only a small area is threatened, then another, and another, then the whole.
Flames arc high and jump from one area to another. Oh no!
One spark has becomes a raging, wild inferno.

Those in harm’s way are cautioned not to stay
Move quickly out of the fires path, flee the flaming inferno’s wrath.
There is no time to pack, Carry no money bag, no sandals or sack.
Into whatever house you enter, first say “Peace be with you”
Be thankful and grateful for what others are willing to do.

Ash and smoke and dust cling to everything.
The winds spread smoke far and wide.
Breathing is difficult, seeing is teary eyed.
Temperatures won’t drop . . . will the fire ever stop?
Firefighters work round the clock but the best they can do is contain.
Only God can stop the inferno, only God can quiet the wind and summon the rain.

Sin in our lives can be like a little spark, one spark and a flame lights.
Spiritually dry conditions and from the one sin a fire ignites.
Realize how little you are in control.
Only a small sin, then another, and another, then the entire soul.
Flames of sin arc high and harm others. Oh no!
One sin has becomes a raging, wild inferno.

We can’t fight the fire if we are constantly at war with one another.
Sin unchecked becomes hate raging against our brother.
We can’t fight the fire if we deceive ourselves that others are always to blame.
Sin unchecked only invites Satan to fan the flame.
We can’t fight the fire if we leave sin in our hearts to bake.
Sin unchecked becomes a raging inferno destroying everything in it’s wake.

Sin will always lead us astray, but God can show us the way.
Are you willing to “Observe Satan fall like lightning from the sky?”
In perfect contrition, seek God’s forgiveness from on high.
Let God’s love shower you with rain to put out sin’s fire.
And let God’s Kingdom be your heart’s greatest desire.
Like the 72 returning from the journey, you will proclaim,
“Lord even the demons are subject to us because of your name.”

In this form, the high bidder acknowledges that he understands the terms of the sale and the obligations to which he will be bound after the sale.
The Secretary may grant an extension of time within which to close. All extensions will be for 30 days, and purchaser must pay a fee, which is the greater of 1.5% of the purchase price or HUD's current holding cost. The extension fee shall be paid in the form of a certified or cashier's check made payable to the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. If the high bidder closes the sale prior to the expiration of any extension period, the unused portion of the extension fee shall be applied toward the amount due at closing.
If the high bidder is unable to close the sale within the required period, or within any extensions of time granted by the Secretary, the high bidder's deposit will be forfeited, and the Commissioner may offer the Project to the second highest bidder for an amount equal to the highest price offered by that bidder. All other terms of the sale would remain the same. If the second highest bidder rejects the Commissioner's offer, no further offers will be made and the sale will be canceled.

the Department of Justice and has said it plans to submit the plan to the Alaska courts by July 18. This plan is still subject to litigation and approval by the court.

The House Committee on Community and Regional Affairs came to Nome July 19 and 20. On the 19th they joined the Pacific NorthWest Economic Region group for a tour of local facilities. The CRA committee will be particularly focused on the City’s port and tank farm as they heard two bills (HB 181 & HB 166) on Saturday that could affect them. HB 181 would allow for a form of revenue sharing when offshore mining leases overlap municipal land. HB 166 expands the bulk fuel loan program to include larger communities. If you have any questions please call my office at 1-800-478-3789 or 1-907-465-3789. Thank you.

ATTACKING — A pod of transient killer whales hunted two gray whales off the coast of Nome. The scene above shows an attack by the orcas on the gray whales.

Pod of Orcas battle two gray whales at East Beach

By Diana Haecker

Nature provided an unforgettable spectacle last week that most people only get to see in nature documentaries on TV. But on Wednesday, July 17 Nomeites saw a show they will likely not forget: Two groups of whales engaged in a battle of survival.

A pod of killer whales was hunting a mother gray whale and her baby, taking the fight into view of hundreds of spectators at East Beach. As the killer whales chased the gray whales, the two hunted animals escaped to the shallows, almost stranding themselves on sandbars in front of the growing human audience.

The gray whales worked themselves free from the shallows in an attempt to get to the deeper waters and making it past the killer whales. As soon as the two large marine mammals got out, the orcas attacked again, trying to separate mother and her baby. The gray whales fled again to the shallower water and the rolling surf while the killer whales pursued but soon broke off their attack. The gray whales remained in the shallow water and waves until the killer whales stopped the attack and vanished. The mother gray whale and her calf remained in the shallow waters for about 20 minutes, resting in the surf. Then they moved slowly to deeper water and left the area.

Marine biologist and Marine advisory program agent Gay Sheffield explained that the gray whales' strategy was to escape to shallow waters where the killer whales' ability to maneuver would be limited. Additionally, the rolling surf in the shallow waters that day may have hampered the killer whales' sonar, making a less than clear image of where the mother whales strong and damaging flukes were, Sheffield said.

The mother whale was seen several times lashing out at the killer whales with her flukes. Sheffield added that although this was an amazing thing to watch, it is not an unusual occurrence between gray whales and killer whales. "These killer whale groups are known as transients," Sheffield said. "They are highly specialized hunters, traveling silently and hunting in small numbers like wolf packs on land. They specialize in hunting large marine mammals — as do many of the communities in our region," said Sheffield.

These transients travel in small family groups and follow walruses, whales, seals and sea lions as they migrate. The gray whales, on the other hand, were, in this instance, the victims.

Mother gray whale and her calf survived the attack from approximately 10 orcas that skillfully tried to separate pair.

Gray whales are also formidable opponents, says Sheffield. "The old Yankee whalers called them 'devil fish' for their very aggressive behavior when hunted," said Sheffield.

The whales had a third party enter their fight. Near the end of the epic struggle, a boat raced from the harbor and neared the scene to, presumably, watch the action. "I would like to remind people that this was a very dangerous situation and it is not a good idea to get involved in an active hunting area with several very large predatory whales as well as a potentially injured mother whale protecting her young," Sheffield said. Having a boat approach is another stress on all the animals in-involved — especially when it is unnecessary, Sheffield said. "We should be mindful of all the animals involved in this situation," said Sheffield.

SEEKING SHELTER — The hunted gray whales, an adult female whale and her young, sought shelter from the attacking orcas in shallow waters off Nome's East Beach.

Nome teenager crowned 2013 Miss Alaska Junior Teen

By Diana Haecker

Nome's own Allaryce Angloinga, 15, was crowned Miss Alaska Junior Teen at the Alaska Miss America Coed pageant in Anchorage in early July.

Her sister Aver Agloinga won third place in the pageant's pre-teen division.

Allaryce is the first rural participant to win the Miss Alaska Junior Teen title in 30 years of the pageant's existence.

The contestants at the Alaska Junior Teen pageant, held at the BP Energy Center in Anchorage, were quizzed on general knowledge about Alaska in front of a panel of judges. Then they had to demonstrate poise, confidence in presenting themselves in several categories. The girls were judged on their natural beauty. In contrast to glamour pageants with big hair and heavy makeup, the Miss Alaska Junior Teen pageant discourages heavy makeup.

In addition to the interview with the judges, the contestants had to give an onstage presentation and then present themselves in evening gowns.

Allaryce took top honors in the Junior Teen age group and will represent Alaska at the 2013 Miss America Junior Teen Pageant scheduled to take place in the last week of November in Orlando, Florida. She competed with 10 girls from Anchorage, Soldotna and Wasilla. Allaryce won a scholarship to attend classes at a pageant coaching agency and a photo shoot with the agency to produce a portfolio.

Allaryce and her 10-year old sister Aver also won the academic achievement category in their respective age divisions.

Being successful in pageants runs in the family.

Their mother Christina Agloinga was crowned Miss Teen Alaska in 1993.

FARMERS MARKET — Lindsay Johnson and Kim Knudsen were vendors at last Saturday's Farmer's Market held inside Old St. Joe's Hall. They sold the local cookbook "Nome Made", birdhouses and flowers. Unfavorable weather drove the market from the great outdoors at Anvil City Square inside Old St. Joe's.
