A red king crab opened in Norton Sound on February 1. No buyers mean the crab will be sold to eager locals.

A Tanner crab fishery also will open at Prince William Sound for one month by special permit starting on March 1.

Southeast Alaska's Tanner and golden king crab fisheries open on February 17. A million pounds or more could come out of the Tanner fishery from 75 crabbers. For goldens, 14 crabbers are expected to drop pots for a 76,500-pound limit.

Also at the Panhandle, fishing continues for black rockfish and ling cod.

About 150 divers are finishing up a 1.7-million-pound sea cucumber harvest and 50 more are still going down for over half a million pounds of geoduck clams.

The Pacific halibut season starts on March 6 and runs through December 7.

Water watch

The state wants to change the rules that regulate water in salmon streams.

A January 15 letter to Alaskans from the Dept. of Natural Resources advises that it is proposing "to revise its water management regulations regarding the appropriation and use of water." The letter explains why the changes are needed and invites Alaskans to comment. Specifically, the Division of Mining, Land and Water (DMLW) is proposing to revise regulations relating to the closure of water right applications, the contents of instream flow reservation applications, the issuance of certificates and the review of such flows, the procedures for temporary water use, public notices and hearings on critical water management areas, and definitions.

The proposed regulations are "intended to provide clarity and consistency in DMLW's Water Section processes," the letter to Alaskans said.

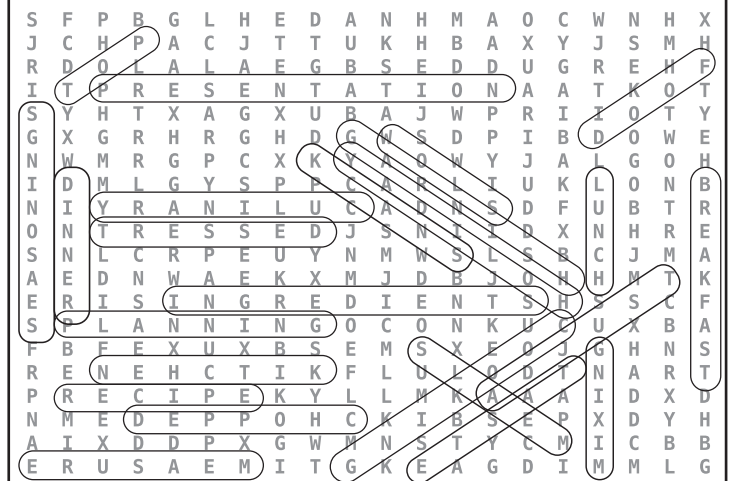

The public can comment on the water changes by February 26.

Find the "Notice of Proposed Changes on Water in the Regulations of the Department of Natural Resources" at the Alaska Online Public Notice System and on DMLW's news website at: <https://dnr.alaska.gov/mlw/news/>.

Comments can be emailed to Brandon McCutcheon, Division of Mining, Land and Water at dnr.water.regulation@alaska.gov.

tion, focus on industry recovery for existing industries, identifying new industries that we might ramp up, things we haven't even thought of, and trying to get that going in a very aggressive way to shorten 10 years of recovery."

How long are we in this slog? "Much of this depends on what Alaskans choose to do (get vaccinated, slow the spread) etc., as well as what happens with new variants and manufacturing of vaccine supply," explained Dr. Anne Zink, chief medical officer for the State of Alaska.

"Vaccine hesitancy will also play a large role in coverage rates as well as the fact children are not yet approved for vaccination."

While challenges lie ahead, Alaska continues to be a leader in the United States for its vaccination rate. "We are vaccinating about 3,500 people/day," Zink said. "In general, it is estimated that somewhere between 70-90 percent of the population will need to be vaccinated depending on the vaccine and strains of the virus."

Targeted Federal Assistance

As Congress considers the American Rescue Plan, Popp recommends "supporting the businesses that have been injured" as well as "the extended unemployment benefits that are going to be needed through this year, if not beyond to keep workers out of poverty and homelessness." As the tourism sector will not recover in 2021, he said that grants to businesses will be critical. For the Alaska economy to rebound, Ms.

Wiebold said "additional federal assistance targeting unemployed and underemployed Alaskans would provide economic stabilization and assist recovery."

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
