PUBLIC NOTICE DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION AND PUBLIC FACILITIES NORTHERN REGION SEASONAL VEHICLE WEIGHT RESTRICTIONS Issue Date: February 23, 2021

This notice is to remind the public and the trucking industry that seasonal weight/load restrictions will be imposed soon by the Department on its highway system for all vehicles over 10,000# GVW. These annual weight restrictions are utilized to reduce roadway damage caused by heavy vehicles traveling on highways weakened during spring break-up conditions. The weight restrictions are stated as a percentage of the maximum axle weight and shall be applied to the maximum axle loading in accordance with 17 AAC 25.013(e).

These annual restrictions are very dependent upon weather, local soil conditions, and frost depth, but usually occur between mid to late-March and late June each year for Interior Alaska. Since these limitations may reduce the allowable gross vehicle weight by as much as 50%, it would be advisable to transport as much freight as possible prior to the above dates. All State routes, including the Dalton Highway, may be subject to seasonal weight restrictions.

Please be advised the DOT&PF are again anticipating placing Weight Restrictions on a portion of the Elliott Highway from Approx. MP 72-154 (Intersection with the Dalton Highway to Mantley). Roadways which lead off of this portion of the Elliott Highway (Minto Road and Tofty Road) may also be restricted. There are no specific restrictions being issued at this time but please see the link below for future notices.

When imposed, or modified, these restrictions will be posted on the DOT&PF Division of Measurement Standards and Commercial Vehicle Enforcement webpage. This can be found at: <http://www.dot.alaska.gov/mscve/index.cfm>. Click the "Commercial Vehicle" link along the top of the page, and then "Weight Restrictions". Choose the latest Northern Region listing to view the current version of our posted seasonal weight restriction notices.

The Department of Public Safety and MSCVE officers will be enforcing these restrictions.

industry, we're pretty conservative. We know what works and we're not super excited about trying things that we don't know. That kind of keeps us more firmly footed in the 20th century instead of the 21st century."

"A lot of the technology innovations in terms of deck machinery, sorting tables, launchers, coiling machines, those are all things that were developed in the '70s and we're still using that stuff," Poulson added. "There's been very little in terms of change but I think there are a lot more opportunities."

Broadly scaling tech advances also is a big challenge to make them cost effective for developers. Poulson said, and something designed for a specific problem or region can mean the user group is too small.

"If a tech company is designing something that is only going to be used for something difficult to build like an automated pot hauler, that's super expensive and really hard to scale. You're not going to have the market opportunity to amortize that over a lot of boats to build a big profit potential for a technology company," he explained. "However, if you can show that there's a lot of other fishing vessels in the U.S. that have some similar sort of a need, then all of a sudden technology companies have a lot larger interest."

"We have fishing groups as members all over the country so we can start to identify patterns," Habegger added. "Maybe folks who are using fixed gear pots in New England might have some similarities with the Dungeness crab fishery on the west coast. And there may be a solution to address whale entanglements across both of these fisheries versus trying to do this piecemeal."

The short survey includes tech advancements in four areas: sustainability, such as bycatch reduction and gear selectivity; safety; productivity, such as robotics and hybrid engines; and data usages and platforms.

SHA hopes to gather responses by the end of May. A priority list and a report will follow along with plans to bring fishermen, tech developers and fishery managers together this fall to move conversations forward. ### Fishy appointee

Another of Governor Mike Dunleavy's fishery appointments has raised eyebrows among stakeholders. Melvin Smith, an Anchorage real estate executive formerly with the Aleut Corporation, will take a lead seat at the Commercial Fisheries Entry Commission, which regulates fishing permits and vessel licenses across Alaska. The job comes with a six-figure salary. The appointment was not announced nor advertised. Coast Alaska reported that Smith's name surfaced when it was sent to the state Senate for consideration by lawmakers. Dunleavy "believes he's the best candidate," spokesman Jeff Turner told Coast Alaska.

Fisherman and former lobbyist Bob Thorstensen added it's customary for someone close or loyal to the governor to be tapped for commissioner jobs. "Whoever gets that job is usually a pretty good friend of the governor's people because it's a choice job," he said. The CFEC's next big task is to determine the right number of permits in various limited entry fisheries, which was originally based on historical participation and may not be the optimum number for a fishery or region.

Community grants

American Seafoods is calling for grant applicants from Kodiak Island, the Aleutian and Pribilof Islands and Western Alaska Peninsula, Bristol Bay, the Lower Kuskokwim, Lower Yukon, Norton Sound and regions north. The majority of each grant award will range from $1,000 to $7,500 for projects addressing food security and community social needs. Recipients will be selected by an advisory board on April 28, 2021. The deadline to submit applications is April 12.
