we're focusing on in Alaska right now, the brown algae, provides everything from food to nutritional supplements to feed supplements for animals, to biofuels, soil amendments and everything in between."

Now it's time to prime more Alaskans to accelerate seaweed farming around the state. "The purpose of the training is to provide the tools to Alaskans to start their own farms," Smith said. Ten applicants will be accepted for each training region and combined with online webinars and two-day onsite visits, they will cover a lot of ground - from identifying seaweed species to navigating the permit process to business plans and harvesting techniques.

Information and instruction will be provided by GreenWave, Alaska Sea Grant, DNR, ADF&G, Blue Evolution, OceansAlaska, AFDF and others. The training sessions are free and food and materials are provided, but participants must pay for their own travel and lodging if they live out of town. The most promising six growers will be selected for two-year mentoring.

"One of the important things we hope to get out of this is more quality applications to DNR. So, the education on site selection and the application process is going to be a huge part of this," Smith said

"The way our statutes are written aquatic farming is the lowest priority use of coastal waters," Rabung explained. "When we review a farm permit, we're looking at its compatibility with existing uses as one of the criteria, such as fisheries. We can't put farms in places that are traditional seine hook offs or troll drags or dive fisheries or subsistence harvest areas. So we have to do all these reviews and see if we can find ways to reconfigure a footprint or adjust its siting to make sure that things are compatible." Applicants also must be aware of navigational hazards and marine mammal haul outs when they are siting their farms.

As the fledgling algae industry develops, state planners are encouraging some growers to form clusters to "really get things going."

"Getting a larger number of farms concentrated around a hub area to get the synergy to create that critical mass and reduce the cost of logistics, transports, and support services that the farms need," Rabung explained. "We need it to become a company, an industry. That's where the state will see its biggest benefit."

So far two Alaska processors, Ocean Beauty and Silver Bay Seafoods, are involved in the new industry.

"They need to know there is enough steady volume to make sure it's worthwhile," Rabung added.

Smith said the emerging mariculture industry has strong interest and support from Governor Dunleavy.

"I think that the administration sees the potential for providing jobs to Alaska and diversifying economies in coastal communities," he said.

Applications for the seaweed farm training sessions are due to AFDF by December 20. Apply online at www.afdf.org or contact rsmith@AFDF.org

Seaweed at Sand Point and beyond

Sand Point will be home to Alaska's farthest west seaweed startup beginning next year. With an assist by Alaska Sea Grant and the Aleutians East Borough, growers plan to test run two different kelp species and harvest them in the spring of 2021.

"Our hope is that we can develop an innovative type of farm that can withstand our weather conditions," said Melissa Good, a Sea Grant agent in Unalaska, speaking to KFSK in Petersburg. "We are living within an extreme environment; they call it the birthplace of the winds for a very good reason. So, we need to show that this can be done here."

"People also are calling from St. Paul and St. George in the Bering Sea," said Julie Decker, AFDF executive director. "They want to know what they need to do to get started."

The global commercial seaweed market is projected to top $22 billion by 2024, with human consumption as the largest segment. Growers in Maine fetch 50 to 60 cents a pound for edible grades; their rock weed crop brings in $20 million a year. Chile estimates a kelp industry would bring in $540 million annually. Japan's $2 billion nori industry is one of the world's most valuable crops.

Seaweed also benefits the planet by absorbing five times more carbon from the atmosphere than land-based plants.

Miscellaneous

Officer Raymond Murray has returned from the Alaska Department of Public Safety academy from Sitka, AK. Raymond Murray successfully graduated and is continuing on his Field Training Program at the Nome Police Department.

Under court case 2NO-19-00150CR, the Nome Police Department was informed that Douglas Henry DOB 6-4-1978 pled guilty to False Information and/or Report AS 11.56.800(a)(1)(A). The effective date was December 6, 2019. Henry had accused two Nome Police Officers of assaulting him and dropping him off outside of Icy View in the winter. The investigation led to objective evidence proving this claim was in its entirety a false report.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

State of Alaska
Department of Natural Resources
Division of Mining, Land and Water

Public Notice Under AS 38.05.945
2020 Nome Offshore Lease Sale for Locatable Minerals

In accordance with AS 38.05.035 and AS 38.05.250 in 2011, the State of Alaska Department of Natural Resources (DNR), Division of Mining, Land and Water (DMLW) produced the Final Finding and Decision to hold an offshore lease sale for locatable minerals for tide and submerged lands offshore of Nome, Alaska. The conclusion of the finding and decision found that it was in the best interest for the State of Alaska and its residents to offer a portion of the proposed area for competitive bidding, providing time to monitor the environmental effects of mining and reserving portions of the sale area for possible future lease sales. As a result, 83 leases were offered for just over 23,000 acres of land. A total of 10 established leases and one modified lease with a total of about 1060 acres were never given or have since been terminated. Therefore, DNR will be having a lease sale for the already established offshore lease tracts that currently do not have a lessee. The proposed lease sale will include lands in the table listed below, and are referenced in our Land Administrative System (LAS) at: <http://dnr.alaska.gov/landrecords/>.

The 2020 Nome Lease Sale will be a sealed bid process, with a live, open to the public reading of the sealed bids on March 23, 2020. Miners will be able to make and send their sealed bids to the State of Alaska starting on January 1, 2020 until 5:00pm (AKST) on February 28, 2020. The minimum bid for each tract is indicated in the bidding packet available on our website at: (<http://dnr.alaska.gov/mlw/mining/nome/>). Additional information including a map, bidder Statement of Qualifications, bidding instructions and forms, and lessee's responsibilities are also available in the packet online.

Successful bidders in the lease sale will receive an offshore mining lease which grants exclusive right to the locatable minerals in the offshore leased boundaries on state-owned tide and submerged land. The lease tracts which range in size from 34 to 375 acres will be issued for a term of 10 years subject to renewal. Before mining operations are conducted on the leases, the operator or lessee will be required to acquire all necessary permits from the regulating agencies having jurisdiction.
